

Reproduction of the text

1. I've read a story (an extract from the story, novel, book) ..... written by N.N..
  - As far as I know N.N. is famous English (American...) writer of the ... century.
  - Unfortunately I don't know anything about this writer.
2.
  - It's the third person narration and the main character of the story is ..... The other characters are .....
  - It's the first person narration and the name of the main character isn't mentioned, so I'll name him/her a boy/girl, a man/woman, a storyteller.
3. I believe the action takes place in the 19th century (nowadays, at the beginning of the 20th century ...)
As I can guess the scene is laid in the village (in a hotel room, in a garden ...)
4. So the story runs as follows .....
.....
5. Conclusion.

I find this episode

- humorous instructive funny sad tragic exciting

I think that the main character is

- brave, decisive generous hardworking honest intelligent kind proud romantic sensitive wise shy
- dishonest aggressive arrogant cruel evil mean violent cowardly stupid

I (didn't) enjoy reading the extract. It was quite interesting (boring).

May be it's only an extract and I couldn't catch the idea of the story.

It would be interesting for me to read the whole story