Backstory: Growing up as the fourth born, Kaito never cared about becoming the heir as he always had dreams of becoming a pro-hero and a singer. After a freak accident during a voice recital however, Kaito ended up permanently losing his voice. That's when he found a passion for dancing. Since he couldn't sing anymore Kaito really wanted to find another outlet for his love of performing. That's why he became a dancer. He utilizes the skills he learned in hero training and the skills he learned from dance training within both avenues of his life. His fighting style is very fluid and dance-like and he is able to utilize his quirk in cool ways during his dance performances. In order to be able to speak with people, Kaito uses an artificial robot voice. The only issue with it being that he has to type out what he says into the program so it takes time for him to respond to people during conversations. Kaito has a very close relationship with his older brother, Oshii and has always looked up to and admired him. He will always praise and rant about how amazing Oshii is when he is brought up in conversation much to the bemusement of Oshii himself.

- He is extremely hard on himself when he messes up
