

Lord Goat Visits Coal Country

Keystone-WV, Jumping off his campaign bus Goat takes a whiff of the dying spirit of the coal town of Keystone, West Virginia. After smelling the coal drenched aroma immediately tries to reenter the bus. After being forced out by his campaign advisors the businessman and father of 6 reluctantly continues down the meet the coal shadowed miners. As he walks he shakes each of their hands.

"Wow you have big hands. Love a man with big hands"

"I didn't know you guys are still able to wear blackface up here"

"I love the culture down here. John Denver is a national treasure."

He approaches a podium made entirely of raw coal. He gets a pump of Pural from his aid and rubs profusely.

"My papa always told me to never trust a man's hands" he tells an aide unaware his mic is on.

"Oops my apologies. Well ladies here I am in coal country. I love coal. Coal is great and such a great form of power. To quote Larry Burns "Coal mining was the best job I ever had." Now I don't agree with Mr. Burns because all of you poor saps are so dirty but apparently this whole coal mumbo jumbo is important so here I am. Now my opponent Ninja has signed off on some climate nonsense in COMMUNIST France. That's right ladies and gentleman Napoleon is taking your jobs in his ivory tower down in Europe. Ninja has said he cares about the environment. This is a sign of WEAKNESS. He is putting the interests of communist Napoleon ahead of the people he swore to protect up in Washington. We need to get out folks. Get out now. Y'know why? Because I love coal and I won't go to Washington just to listen to what some Frenchmen say about saving the polar bears. We will bring back the jobs folks. All of em. I will not pay heed to these scientists and their communist thoughts. I will never believe any fact that may cause you any harm. That's why I will personally go up to our President in Washington and say "Mr. President! You don't lead communist France! You lead us here in the bea-u-tiful West Virginia!" So do what you need to do folks not for me but for you! Good luck and Godbless West Virginia."