Adair Peck

Adair's work is a vivid and layered exploration of color, design, and intuition. She works primarily in collage, mixed media, and acrylic on canvas, often blending playful spontaneity with deliberate composition. Recurring themes include botanical elements inspired by farmers' market visits, the lively presence of birds outside her studio window, storm-wrecked fishing boats, and introspective figures—each reflecting a deep engagement with both external and internal landscapes.

Influenced by German Expressionism and Mexican Folk Art, Adair embraces bold color in both her paintings and papier-mâché sculptures. Her practice spans a range of media, including encaustic painting, chine-collé woodcut printmaking, and large-scale collage on canvas.

Originally from the Chicago area, Adair was encouraged in her artistic pursuits by her mother, renowned painter Fay Peck. She earned her BFA in painting from Boston University and her MFA from Brooklyn College in New York. A constant observer, Adair draws wherever she goes, always seeking new ideas and imagery.

For the past 20 years, Adair has lived in Bozeman, Montana with her husband Todd, where they raised their three daughters.
