

SOC 205 Week 10: Personal Reflection

Points: 10

Submitting a text entry box or a file upload

Purpose (Why we do this)

You have shared so many interesting things, sociological applications, and your own personal experiences and I would like you to see first hand your growth and development in sociology.

This assignment aligns with the following course learning outcomes:

- Demonstrate a sociological understanding of historical and cultural contexts of social events.
- Describe core sociological theories and processes.
- Use the scientific method to examine our social world.
- Find applications for sociological theories and concepts in their own lives.
- Demonstrate a critical perspective of social conditions.

Tasks

1. Review your reflections, Google Earth and Padlet posts from the past nine weeks and make some notes of what you have learned, how you have grown, and the community you have created or are a part of.
2. I would like you to write a 500 word minimum (one page, single spaced or two pages double spaced reflective analysis on this term's learning).
3. Save this document using your name, final reflection analysis, term, and SOC205
 - a. Example: SonyaJames_FinalReflection_SPRING2023_SOC205
 - b. Your reflexive analysis should address the following:
 - i. What did you learn?
 - ii. What is Sociology?
 - iii. How can you apply Sociology to your daily life?
4. Submit the document in Moodle under the Final Reflection tab.

Criteria for success

Read the directions carefully, as this is not your typical weekly reflection submission.

This is a final reflection analysis. I am looking for a critical reflection of your sociological learning and application, along with a grasp of sociological concepts we reviewed in class. Be sure to answer the questions above in your reflection.

Rubric

Articulated learning over different modalities (Google Earth, Padlet, Moodle) ____/2

Defined and applied sociology ____/2

Demonstrated understanding of sociological concepts ____/2