

Lucky Broken By Keny Ryan

In the story Lucky Broken Girl, there is a character that is living in a time like us. That name is Ruthie. But what if COVID-19 came around when Ruthie was in her body cast for that year?

Will the events be the same for her or not? Maybe, maybe not. Just read this essay to find out.

The real events in the story is that there was no Covid, and Ruthie has Chicho, and Ms. Joy to help her when she couldn't go to school. Now, since there is no technology, no one could go to school, nor learn in any way. I think that the government is going to extend school after the students can go back.

They will have to go to school every day of the week. Then she started to feel more lonely. It's been 2 months now, and Ruthie is starting to get really bored. Can you imagine a girl stuck in her house when the rest of her family members can move around the house, but she can't because of COVID, and her injury?

You could now because of quarantine, but before quarantine, could you? I don't think so. All in all, Ruthie is more affected by COVID than us because she is in a different time period than us.

If COVID struck when Ruthie was in her body cast, the people around her definitely change, especially her parents. Papi most likely loses his job because he can't pay the bills.

Therefore, the whole family probably lost their spot in the apartment. Wow, a five year old named Izzie would also be going through what the family is going through. I can't believe that Izzie has to go through that. That is so bad, especially for a 5-year old.

Danielle would also change. That is because she can't see Ruthie anymore and feels sad also. She wants to come see her like she did in the story. Now, she has nobody to talk to, and Ramu moved to India. So, Ruthie can't even talk to anyone besides Izzie.

Lastly the world was heavily affected by this. First off, the world once said that it was impossible to treat Cancer. Now, they can't find a way to cure the virus, not that we have a cure, but back then, it would be more of a pandemic because there would be no developed technology tools to save the world.

All in all, the coronavirus would have had a greater impact on our history than it has in these technology rich times.

Dear Keny Ryan,

This is so logically and accurately analysed.

I am even more impressed by the way you emotionally grasp how more devastating this would be minus technology .

I know you have benefited from the rigorous critical thinking community Mrs. Francis nurtured.

I look forward to hearing and to reading more from you next year.
