commissions

process

- > Please tell me if you will be unable to check my messages for a long period of time.
- > Watermarked images will be shown until everything has been paid.
- > I have the right to deny revisions to the artwork, as well as refuse or discontinue a commission.

payment

- > At least $5 must be paid upfront after the sketch is given or the commission will not be continued.
 - > If your commission is discontinued, the final image you receive is whatever I have done at that point in time and is what I will charge for. I will refund money if needed.
 - > Revisions are free unless you're asking me to redo an entire stage (such as shading or backgrounds). Pricing is a case-by-case basis, so I'll give you an estimate when you ask (it should average around $5 though).

designs

- > Credit me as the designer of the character.

- > You can regift/trade/etc as long as it is being given at the price it is worth. Do not resell for a different price than you got it.
 - > Do not copy, trace, or heavily reference these designs.
 - > Editing the design is fine and encouraged!

art made for you

This includes any art that I make specifically for you or with the intent of giving to you when complete, such as art trades, gifts, and commissions

- > I have copyright ownership of the art (see the US copyright act).
- > The art is for your personal use, not to resell.
- > You may post the final artwork with credit (a link is preferred but just my name is okay)
- > I will most likely post the final image of the artwork- if you'd like it to remain private, just tell me.
- > The below rules also apply.

posted artworks

This includes any artwork I post not intended to give to anybody, such as fanart or personal works

- > Do not reupload my art, or upload edited versions of my art. Reposting as a feature of the site is okay (such as reblogging on Tumblr)!
- > Unless I have given you permission, do not include my animations in animation tributes.

- > Do not trace my art, claim my art is yours or was made by you.
- > Do not steal my art to sell, train AI, or for NFT's.
- > If you would like to use my art in a character profile, for decoration, etc, ask me first.
