Personality:

- + Courageous / Adventurous / Charismatic / Dedicated / Cheerful
- Stupid / Distractable / Single-minded / Meddlesome / Clingy

First of all, Jin is quite stupid. She has okay emotional intelligence, can vaguely read the mood but her regular intelligence is a sad 4 points. Barely passes her exams and will usually not be able to answer questions when asked in class. However, she remains cheerful and undeterred in spite of any failures. Always seen sporting a smile, she doesn't let most things get her down.

To make up for her poor academic performance, she excels in sports and anything that requires physical stuff. She will happily clean up the class and take out the trash any day. Harboring an adventurous spirit, she enjoys trying out new activities and going to new places. Usually without plans. May even be a bit too courageous despite her stupidity and lack of planning, possibly bordering on foolhardiness. She gets into most things without fear of either injuries or failure. Humiliation probably doesn't exist in her very limited dictionary.

Her natural and open bearings may appeal to people, being genuinely interested and concerned about people she comes across, she can be rather charismatic if you see past her stupidity. Although she can get rather meddlesome when she thinks someone needs help. She can and will get into your business, but at least she sometimes remembers to ask for permission first.

Jin is extremely dedicated to things she has started. Once she has decided or promised to do something, she will see it through to the end. However, as she is distractible, she may sometimes go off course and take a detour. But she will always go back to whatever she has started to finish them.

To people she likes, she could get a little clingy. Jin can and will get imprinted on people, following them around if she finds them nice and respects them. (Not respecting personal space tho im sorry) She just tags along to try to see if there's anything she could help with and just to hang out with the person. Though if told to leave, she would. Besides that, she is also very single-minded. Jin can only focus on one thing/person at a time, and may end up neglecting people sometimes, but definitely not because she doesn't care. She just can't manage splitting her attention very well, this may result in delayed responses to certain things or a failure to even notice it at all, which she would be quite sad about and reflect upon if she realizes later on.

Lastly, she gets touched easily and would cry if she sees/hears about something sad. Or touching. Honestly she will burst into tears watching a performance. But she also recovers quickly so no need to worry.

Background/History:

Jin grew up happy, loved and taken care of by both her parents and her grandparents on both sides of the family. She has a close relationship with her grandparents and they all doted on her ever since she was born. As her grandparents on her mother's side reside in China while her father's side lives in Japan, she frequently traveled between the two countries from a tender age.

Her magic first manifested very early while she was still a baby. They first noticed things started randomly levitating whenever her grandmother carried her and eventually realized that her grandmother's ring was the catalyst for her telekinetic abilities. Everyone was thrilled that she had the same ability as her mother. The ring was given to Jin's mother for safe keeping in case the baby hurt herself by accident until she was old enough to learn how to control it. When she got older, the ring was passed to her to practice with. As a proficient telekinesis user herself, Jin's mother personally trained her and Jin picked it up quickly. She enjoyed the sessions with her mother tremendously and it helped them bond more because her mother used to be busy with work as a managing director and they didn't get to spend as much time together as both of them would have liked. Ever since then, Jin always wears the ring on a necklace under her clothes.

Her father was often away due to his work in the Navy, but he always spent all his time at home with the family, often taking them on outings to various places, but quite often the beach or even out to sea. Worried about his family while he is gone, he began teaching Jin some basic self-defense so that she could at least take care of herself in case something happened. She enjoyed the lessons so much that she did her own research and asked to take up Krav Maga because it was supposed to be the most practical.

As a child, Jin never enjoyed staying still and studying. She enjoyed the stories her grandparents would tell her, but could never stay still for long. Her mother used to have to distract her by making a show out of her toys using telekinesis to play with her till she was tired enough to sleep because simply reading a story never worked. Even now, she learns better through hands-on exercises and physical things, barely passing her classes.

Due to the prestigious reputation of the school and knowing Jin's love of marine life, her parents both decided that Azarashi High would be the best choice. Jin herself went to the open house to take a look and felt very comfortable with the facilities and people she had met there. Hoping that the holistic education offered would also somehow help boost her grades, since she would likely have to get in through her magical and physical aptitude.

Reason for joining Azarashi High:

Her dad brought the family to visit the seaside quite often which got her interested in marine life. The school being famous for the seals and great reputation, also being generally nearby are the main reasons for choosing the school.
