In Italy it's just the same. A friend of mine found herself with a metastatic brain cancer 4 months after the Pfizer shot. Her neurosurgeon told her in October not to have the third shot. Recently she had another visit with him and he told her to do the jab because 'probably' she already had that tumour before. Note that in Italy the medical staff is obliged by law to report any suspected adverse event of any drug. But doctors who report are just a small minority.

In the village where my friend lives another man, after the vaccine, now has a brain tumour that can't be removed due to the position. Another one who had pneumonia before the first Covid outbreak and had a CT scan which didn't show any sign of tumour, after the Covid vaccine now has disseminated tumours in his lungs.

Here's the video made by my friend, with English subtitles
