Title of the Research Paper: Why Should Taiwan Employ Asymmetric

Approaches to Its National Defense and International Strategy?

Nowadays, Taiwan and China have very complicated relations, and the tension between the two countries is becoming even more serious. China promises it will not give up using military power to “reunify” Taiwan, China even has over 220 billion dollars in its national defense budget. Yet, Taiwan in comparison only has 19 billion dollars in its military budget. Given the current tie in the limitation of the economy, what method Taiwan should consider employing in its national defense system and international strategy in order to defend itself effectively? The research aims to suggest the best options for Taiwan to apply to its national defense strategy and its international strategy to maintain deterrence.
