

Idea 3 Essay -

While I hear or come across failure, I believe it is our life-long incidents to improve ourselves daily without giving up. But, coming to our idea of sharing a personal essay when I failed at something and what I learned from that, here goes:

As I said first, failure is not a vocabulary in my life. Rather, I consider failures as challenges to give my best and be happy at the end of the day. Anyway, the idea demands that share my failures, let me reveal them–

During my school days, I was a very poor performer in Hindi, Maths and Chemistry subjects. I always think these subjects are difficult for me to learn. As such, I couldn't improve my scores during the examination.

But with God's grace, I got good teachers apart from my school teachers to teach and take away my fear of subjects – Hindi and Maths. As days went by, I started to overcome the fear as well as improve my scores during the examinations. Finally, I scored good marks in my tenth public examination.

Meanwhile, this was not the case with the subject, Chemistry. I didn't get a good teacher to guide me. At that time, I was a guru to myself to train and study hard to conquer my fears. At last, to my surprise, during the twelfth public examination, I was surprised to see that I scored extra marks in Chemistry than in Maths.

From these incidents, I learned to –

- Overcome the subjects' fear by scheduling a timetable to study the subjects.
- Daily consistency can be a little difficult because I have to study the remaining subjects. Still, being consistent with a scheduled timetable to learn my weak subjects, made me more confident to approach the examinations than earlier.
- Unstructured routine leads to confusion but a slighter collapsed yet consistent practice of studying hard gains clarity and confidence with our activities.
- Last but not least, hard work never fails in whatever stage in our life. Most importantly, believing in ourselves is also required to fulfill our dreams, goals, or whatever in our life.

Idea 4 Seven benefits of daily reading for your mind are –

Hello everyone,

Here goes benefits of daily reading for your mind -

- 1) Improves vocabulary.
- 2) Gain confidence and learn different perceptions that you were not aware of earlier.
- 3) Come up with creative ideas.
- 4) Enhances your knowledge and improves various walks of life.
- 5) You can influence your community by being a mentor and coach.
- 6) You can become a better communicator or public speaker.
- 7) Sometimes, reading can make you good decision makers by analyzing the content in the books instead of rushing and making wrong decisions.

Thank you for reading the post. See you soon with another interesting source of knowledge:)