

Collect Submissions Offline

You can create assessments that appear on the Course Content page that don't require students to upload submissions. You can add instructions, files, a rubric, and goals so students can prepare for the offline work. You can also enable conversations, but you can't add questions or grade anonymously.

Examples of offline work:

- Oral presentations
- Science fair projects
- Acting performances
- Artwork delivered in person
- Face-to-face team building exercises, panel discussions, and debates

Instructors who teach hybrid courses may find this type of assessment most useful. For example, you can use a rubric to grade an in-class presentation as a student presents. No need to take notes or add a score later.

When you create an assessment, you can choose to collect submissions offline in the settings panel. When students open this type of assessment, they're informed they can't submit work online. If you create groups to collect submissions offline, students can view their group members.

The screenshot displays the Blackboard interface for an assignment titled "Unraveling Genetic Mysteries" within the course "Introduction to Anatomy_245P". The left pane shows the "Content and Settings" tab, with a message indicating that submissions are collected offline. The right pane shows the "Assignment Settings" panel, where the "Collect submissions offline" option is checked and highlighted with a red box. A red arrow points from this box to the offline submission message in the left pane.
