Sugar Labs Guided Tour

Team Member Names:

- With a partner, make a copy of this SugarLabsTour-MASTER document.
- Rename your copy using the convention SugarLabsTour-LastnameLastname.
- Follow the instructions within and each submit your completed document to Moodle. Work through the document together, as a team. (Do not divide-and-conquer!)

Take yourself on a guided tour of the Sugar Labs Project. With your partner, take notes and answer each of the seven bulleted prompts throughout this document.

Read the information found here to get an overview of the goals of the project and the latest news.

Read the Getting Involved page, which describes the roles of various contributors to Sugar Labs. Note that there are a variety of different types of contributions that may be made by people in different roles.

- Summarize the roles that you think would be most applicable to a course such as this one.
- What are the commonalities across roles? What are the differences?

An overview of the Sugar Labs bug tracker may be found here. A specific query on the Sugar Labs bug tracker can be found here.

- Describe the general process for submitting a bug.
- Indicate the types/categories of tickets listed on this page as well as the information available for each ticket.

The Sugar Labs repository lives here. Click the Commits link and determine the date of last commit (an update of the repository).

- Record this date.

Information about Sugar's release cycle and roadmap can be found here.

- Describe how the release cycle and roadmap update are related.

Sugar Labs promotes communication among its community members in the following ways: IRC, Mailing lists, Blog, Wiki

- Pick two methods of communication and contrast how they are used within the community.

If time permits, head over to Runestone Interactive and https://github.com/RunestoneInteractive then:

- Discuss similarities and differences between the organization of these two open source projects, namely between SugarLabs and Runestone.

Submission

When you are done, you each must submit a sharing link to this of this completed document to Moodle.
