

The book I want to introduce is Lamia and the Midwife.

A long time ago, Bacchus folklore recorded some wonderful creatures living in the forest. Lamia is one of the most famous examples, They are beautiful women with duck-like feet, and they are not trusted.

One day a Lamia is going to have a baby, the midwife went to their place of residence and helped her give birth to the child. The Lamia expressed their gratitude and asked her to eat some food. But because it was so delicious, she stole a piece of bread and put it in her pocket. Before leaving, Lamia gave her some gifts and told her not to look back after she left, but she forgot their instructions and turned back when she got home, so all the gifts on her body disappeared, and the only thing left was that she left her memories of those delicacies.
