

Final - Your Choice

You are to make a multi-page website about something you are passionate about, but it can't be something you've already done a website for (with the exception of the topic chosen for the Google Site).

Highly recommend one of the following topics:

- Restaurant/Store
- Career
- Hobby/Food Blog
- (See past final topics)

I am not grading you on research, so I am okay with you copying text/images from other sources (how often do you hear a teacher say that?), but this is your final project, so all HTML & CSS is supposed to be your own. Any text taken from websites must be cited using any method you choose, but should at the least contain the source of the material. Having said that, if you ever want this site to be something you post live on the web for portfolio purposes, make sure that the content is your own (people don't look favorably on plagiarism). Do not copy and paste code from past projects. You're welcome to reference past projects, our SaxonCS website, W3schools, but please don't copy/paste any code.

Your code must demonstrate:

- Decent design principles
 - Layout
 - Color
 - Spacing
- Valid HTML
- Valid CSS
- HTML Concepts
 - Semantic Elements (header, footer, nav, main, section, aside, etc.)
 - Headings
 - Paragraphs
 - Images
 - List or Table somewhere on the page
 - Anchor Tag (Links)
 - An inline text change (strong, emphasis, span)
 - ID & Class
- CSS Concepts (including but not limited to)
 - Font Changes (Font-size, font-family, font-weight, text-decoration, color, etc)
 - color/background-color changes
 - Text or box shadow

- Margin & Padding
- Border
- Hover
- Flex
- Optional - Float
- ID Selector
- Class Selector

Grading Rubric:

10%	Basic HTML setup containing opening & closing tags for - doctype, html, head, body, title
10%	Identifiable divisions for - Header, Footer, Nav, Main
10%	Demonstrate HTML Proficiency (img, p, h1, h2, lists, etc.) & best practices
20%	Linked CSS page - Stylized horizontal or vertical navigation - Creates visible separations for header, footer, nav, and main. - CSS Proficiency (colors, fonts, positioning, etc.) & best practices - 10+ selectors - 10+ CSS properties
10%	Complete Home Page
10%	Complete 2nd page
10%	Complete 3rd page
10%	Consistent, Working Navigation (links actually work)
10%	Effort (did you try? Lots of content? Nice look?)
5% EC	Anything over and beyond <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Embedded content (map, video, Google Slide)• Navigation items colored differently when on the page it's for• Add additional javascript that does something useful for the purpose of the site.• Add additional pages to further enhance the site.• Bootstrap

General Steps:

1. Pick a topic.

Example: Five Guys Burgers and Fries

2. Come up with a layout and get the HTML and CSS set before worrying about content or the final look. Your final project doesn't have to have the same look as the one below, but you should have a header, a footer, a primary section (main), a menu/nav, and a sidebar (if desired).

Everything after this point is subjective, but can be used as a nice guideline to help you focus your design. Yours does not need to (and should not) look like this one. This is simply an example. Make your site work for your topic.

3. Modify your header to be more representative of the final header you want to have. Include a logo, a title, and a sub-title if appropriate. You may need to modify other elements (like the body background color) to get the look you're looking for.

4. Modify your navigation to be more representative of the final navigation you want to have. Make sure your navigation contains the minimum links to other pages necessary for the final project. You may need to modify other elements (like the body background color, or parts of the header) to get the look you're looking for.

(In this example, the History and Order page are not implemented)

5. Modify your Section /Main to be more representative of the final Section you want to have. Add some text and an image to help draw out a general purpose for the website. Text here should be a summary of the website and saving that particular animal. You may need to modify other elements (like the body background color, the header, or the navigation) to get the look you're looking for.

FIVE GUYS®

BURGERS and FRIES

HomeHistoryMenuOrder

History

Five Guys was founded in 1986 by Janie and Jerry Murrell; Jerry and the couple's sons, Matt, Jim, Chad, and Ben, were the original "Five Guys." The Murrells had a fifth son, Tyler, two years later. Today, all five sons, the current "Five Guys", are involved: Matt and Jim travel the country visiting stores, Chad oversees training, Ben selects the franchisees, and Tyler runs the bakery. The first Five Guys was in Arlington's Westmont Shopping Center. Buns were baked in the same center by Brenner's Bakery. This location closed, in favor of another in Alexandria, at the intersection of King and North Beauregard Streets, which closed on September 21, 2013.

More followed in Old Town Alexandria and Springfield, Virginia, making five by 2001. Their success encouraged the Murrells to franchise their concept the following year, engaging Fransmart, a franchise sales organization. Former Washington Redskins kicker Mark Moseley, who had gone to work for Fransmart after his football career, played a key role in Five Guys' expansion and went on to become the company's director of franchise development after it ended its business relationship with Fransmart. In early 2003 the chain began franchising, opening the doors to rapid expansion which caught the attention of national restaurant trade organizations and the national press. The expansion started in Virginia and Maryland, and by the end of 2004, over 300 units were in development through the Northeast. Over the next few years the chain rapidly expanded across the entire United States and into Canada, reaching over 1,000 locations by 2012.

The first location outside North America opened in the United Kingdom in July 2013, in London on Long Acre in Covent Garden, one day before the opening of Shake Shack's first UK outlet just 300m away. The second location was in Reading, Berkshire. The chain now has 27 restaurants open across the UK.

6. Modify your Aside to be more representative of the final Aside you want to have. Consider using a sidebar to add quotes, facts, or other things that might be interesting to the reader. You may need to modify other elements (like the body background color, the header, the navigation, or the section) to get the look you're looking for.

FIVE GUYS®

BURGERS and FRIES

HomeHistoryMenuOrder

History

Five Guys was founded in 1986 by Janie and Jerry Murrell; Jerry and the couple's sons, Matt, Jim, Chad, and Ben, were the original "Five Guys." The Murrells had a fifth son, Tyler, two years later. Today, all five sons, the current "Five Guys", are involved: Matt and Jim travel the country visiting stores, Chad oversees training, Ben selects the franchisees, and Tyler runs the bakery. The first Five Guys was in Arlington's Westmont Shopping Center. Buns were baked in the same center by Brenner's Bakery. This location closed, in favor of another in Alexandria, at the intersection of King and North Beauregard Streets, which closed on September 21, 2013.

More followed in Old Town Alexandria and Springfield, Virginia, making five by 2001. Their success encouraged the Murrells to franchise their concept the following year, engaging Fransmart, a franchise sales organization. Former Washington Redskins kicker Mark Moseley, who had gone to work for Fransmart after his football career, played a key role in Five Guys' expansion and went on to become the company's director of franchise development after it ended its business relationship with Fransmart. In early 2003 the chain began franchising, opening the doors to rapid expansion which caught the attention of national restaurant trade organizations and the national press. The expansion started in Virginia and Maryland, and by the end of 2004, over 300 units were in development through the Northeast. Over the next few years the chain rapidly expanded across the entire United States and into Canada, reaching over 1,000 locations by 2012.

The first location outside North America opened in the United Kingdom in July 2013, in London on Long Acre in Covent Garden, one day before the opening of Shake Shack's first UK outlet just 300m away. The second location was in Reading, Berkshire. The chain now has 27 restaurants open across the UK.

"'Fresh' is the word that most describes this burger"

The OCC Register
California

"Quality ingredients and attention to details are Five Guys' secrets"

DC North
Washington, DC

"A simple focus on quality food"

Readers Choice Award
Colorado

7. Modify your Footer to be more representative of the final Footer you want to have. Consider using a footer to add a copyright, redisplay the menu, add additional links, or add other short pieces of info. You may need to modify other elements (like the body background color, the header, the navigation, the section, or the aside) to get the look you're looking for.

FIVE GUYS®

BURGERS and FRIES

HomeHistoryMenuOrder

History

Five Guys was founded in 1986 by Janie and Jerry Murrell. Jerry and the couple's sons, Matt, Jim, Chad, and Ben, were the original "Five Guys." The Murrells had a fifth son, Tyler, two years later. Today, all five sons, the current "Five Guys", are involved: Matt and Jim travel the country visiting stores, Chad oversees training, Ben selects the franchisees, and Tyler runs the bakery. The first Five Guys was in Arlington's Westmont Shopping Center. Buns were baked in the same center by Brenner's Bakery. This location closed, in favor of another in Alexandria, at the intersection of King and North Beauregard Streets, which closed on September 21, 2013.

More followed in Old Town Alexandria and Springfield, Virginia, making five by 2001. Their success encouraged the Murrells to franchise their concept the following year, engaging Fransmart, a franchise sales organization. Former Washington Redskins kicker Mark Moseley, who had gone to work for Fransmart after his football career, played a key role in Five Guys' expansion and went on to become the company's director of franchise development after it ended its business relationship with Fransmart. In early 2003 the chain began franchising, opening the doors to rapid expansion which caught the attention of national restaurant trade organizations and the national press. The expansion started in Virginia and Maryland, and by the end of 2004, over 300 units were in development through the Northeast. Over the next few years the chain rapidly expanded across the entire United States and into Canada, reaching over 1,000 locations by 2012.

The first location outside North America opened in the United Kingdom in July 2013, in London on Long Acre in Covent Garden, one day before the opening of Shake Shack's first UK outlet just 300m away. The second location was in Reading, Berkshire. The chain now has 27 restaurants open across the UK.

"'Fresh' is the word that most describes this burger"

The OCC Register
California

"Quality ingredients and attention to details are Five Guys' secrets"

DC North
Washington, DC

"A simple focus on quality food"

Readers Choice Award
Colorado

© Copyright Birkel 2015

-
- # FIVE GUYS[®]

BURGERS and FRIES
- Home
- History
- Menu
- Order
- ### History
- Five Guys was founded in 1986 by Janie and Jerry Murrell; Jerry and the couple's sons, Matt, Jim, Chad, and Ben, were the original "Five Guys." The Murrells had a fifth son, Tyler, two years later. Today, all five sons, the current "Five Guys", are involved: Matt and Jim travel the country visiting stores, Chad oversees training, Ben selects the franchisees, and Tyler runs the bakery. The first Five Guys was in Arlington's Westmont Shopping Center. Buns were baked in the same center by Bremner's Bakery. This location closed, in favor of another in Alexandria, at the intersection of King and North Beauregard Streets, which closed on September 21, 2013.
-
- More followed in Old Town Alexandria and Springfield, Virginia, making five by 2001. Their success encouraged the Murrells to franchise their concept the following year, engaging Fransmart, a franchise sales organization. Former Washington Redskins kicker Mark Moseley, who had gone to work for Fransmart after his football career, played a key role in Five Guys' expansion and went on to become the company's director of franchise development after it ended its business relationship with Fransmart. In early 2003 the chain began franchising, opening the doors to rapid expansion which caught the attention of national restaurant trade organizations and the national press. The expansion started in Virginia and Maryland, and by the end of 2004, over 300 units were in development throughout the Northeast. Over the next few years the chain rapidly expanded across the entire United States and into Canada, reaching over 1,000 locations by 2012.
- The first location outside North America opened in the United Kingdom in July 2013, in London on Long Acre in Covent Garden, one day before the opening of Shake Shack's first UK outlet just 300m away. The second location was in Reading, Berkshire. The chain now has 27 restaurants open across the UK.
- "'Fresh' is the word that most describes this burger"
- The OCC Register
California
- "Quality ingredients and attention to details are Five
Guys' secrets"
- DC North
Washington, DC
- "A simple focus on quality
food"
- Reader's Choice Award
Colorado
- © Copyright Birkel 2015

9. Copy the html file and use it to make all the rest of your files. Change the content to work for the new pages, and you're basically done.

FIVE GUYS®

BURGERS and FRIES

HomeHistoryMenuOrder