

Stephanie Cardenas

Dr. Bonnie Kyburz

English 103

September 4, 2019

Disadvantages of Online Shopping

I love online shopping, I can open my computer or phone and look on different websites for hours but because I online shop so much, it causes my bank account to decrease. I feel that many people like to go online because it's easier than leaving the house to get things, but what are some of the consequences to online shopping?

One consequence is when you order something from a website you don't know if it's going to come in too big or too small because as online shoppers, we didn't have the option of trying it on. As a shopper we like to try on clothes to make sure it's the right fit. Another consequence could be the difficulties of refunds and exchanges. If you don't like the item that you receive and want your money back, first you're going to have to package it then go to the post office and pay for shipping. By the end you usually have to wait 3-7 business days for the money to get deposited back into your account.

People who are anti-social and don't enjoy interacting with other people may consider online shopping better. When you're online shopping you don't interact with people as you would do in the stores which could take away from the initial experience of going into the store.

If we could stop and realize how often we online shop we can think about how it's not the same as when we go into a store and find exactly what you are looking for.