LASIK Eye Surgery - Things to Consider Before Opting for the Surgery

Tired of wearing glasses and contact lenses, then LASIK, also called laser vision correction surgery, is the ultimate alternative to correct your vision. LASIK is one of the most popular vision correction surgeries in the world today. It is estimated that more than 1.3 million procedures are being performed annually. But, before you opt for this procedure, make sure you become an informed consumer.

As you know... in all surgical procedures, good outcomes begin with proper understanding of the procedure and your eligibility for the procedure. You should be well informed about many various LASIK surgery techniques and you can also discuss with your friends or relatives that have undergone surgery already. To expect better outcome, you must be careful to thoroughly explain your medical history to your LASIK eye surgeon for evaluation. It is also important for you to tell your motivations or expectation for surgery.

Next important thing is that you must be over 18 years old and you have had a stable glass glasses or contact lenses prescription for at least two years. Some LASIK eye surgeons don't risk performing surgery to those patients who are younger than 20 years old because their visions are still unstable. If you have previous ocular surgery or corneal injuries predisposing to poor exposure or suction failure; history of steroid induced ocular hypertension or medication allergies; collagen vascular diseases; hormonal status and systematic medications such as steroids, you should consult with your surgeon. In addition, patient should be free from certain diseases like diabetes, ocular herpes simplex, glaucoma, keratononus, cataracts or any eye diseases. If you are pregnant or nursing and have fluctuating hormones, you are not ideal candidate for LASIK.

If you meet all the following condition, it is also important for you to understand the benefits, outcomes, risks and complications of LASIK. In addition, as LASIK is a quick procedure and may seem simple, the theory and reality of proper technique is more complex. Thus, it is essential for you to find LASIK eye surgeon who is well trained. The surgeon you choose should take the three basic steps to optimize the results of LASIK surgery: First, proper assessment of the patients preoperative motivations and expectations. Second is thorough preoperative testing with selection of the appropriate refractive surgical technique. And third, good intraoperative and postoperative techniques including an understanding of how to manage complications.

Apart from your own evaluation for eligibility and selection of surgeon, the other important aspect you also have to consider the LASIK cost. Make sure it is affordable or not and whether your health insurance covers this type of surgery. It is always better to consult with your surgeon to get price estimation and payment option. If you are looking for Los Angeles Lasik Surgeon, there are so many eye surgeons in the city that can help you correcting the vision using really the most advanced techniques and technology available in the world.
