Big Cats, in one form or another, can be found every where if you look for the signs. Just because you see the signs of a Big Cat does not mean that you need to be afraid. If you make a few changes to your landscape and changing the way you do things you can reduce your chances of having unwanted wild visitors.

Big Cats are found all over the world.

Lions are found in parts of sub-Saharan Africa. A very small population of Asian Lions in the India's Gir Forest.

Tigers range from Siberia's temperate forests to subtropical and tropical forests on the Indian subcontinent and Sumatra.

Jaguars are found in significant numbers in remote regions of South and Central America — particularly in the Amazon Basin.

Cougar's can be found from the Canadian Yukon to the southern Andes of South America. It has the widest area of habitat of the large wild terrestrial mammals in the Western Hemisphere. The Cougar can be found in most American habitats and it is the biggest cat in North America.

Cheetahs are currently confined to parts of eastern, central and southwestern Africa and a small portion of Iran.
