

GBV AoR Community of Practice

Building community, talking about challenges, exploring solutions, celebrating successes

The online GBV AoR Community of Practice is a place for GBV specialists in humanitarian emergency settings.

- We share a common sense of purpose in this work
- We want to learn and share together to deepen our understanding, strengthen our abilities, and broaden our networks
- We are committed to working together to increase the overall effectiveness of prevention and response to GBV in emergencies

Virtual discussions range from informal requests for suggestions and resources to in-depth conversations. Frequent thematic webinars are led by experienced professionals to promote learning, motivate new thinking, and facilitate online discussions on the critical issues that many of us are facing in our day to day work. Members also share information about professional development, training, job opportunities, and events.

CoP members represent a mix of emerging and experienced GBV practitioners from:

- a range of professional backgrounds
- different levels of supervisory and leadership responsibility
- different types of GBV specialist roles (clinicians, managers, trainers, advisors, coordinators, etc.)
- a wide range of geographic locations
- a mix of field-based and headquarters-based professionals
- diverse nationalities, cultures, and ages
- local, national or international organizations, non-governmental or government organizations, multilateral organizations, research or educational institutions; they may be self-employed; they may be between jobs.
