Building on the strengths-and-needs activity from our spring meeting, this session will highlight systems that have developed effective approaches to using data within the MTSS framework to guide progress monitoring, instructional decision-making, and responsive supports. Participants will hear about changes to structures that are putting strong practices into action—such as designing tiered interventions, aligning resources to student needs, and adapting instructional strategies based on data trends. Together, we will explore strategies that have led to measurable success and consider how these approaches can be applied in our own contexts to strengthen how we use data to drive learning and growth.* https://tinyurl.com/VTCLA ● Session 2: Join Shannon Lessley, HUUSD Director of Curriculum and Technology, and Mandy Couturier, HUUSD Director of MTSS, as we share our district's journey in prioritizing what we measure to better guide student learning and growth. By clarifying which data matter most, aligning assessment systems with instructional priorities, and embedding data use into collaborative practices, we're aiming to reduce noise and strengthen our MTSS. Participants will hear how these shifts have improved decision-making, supported responsive interventions, and built shared ownership.

	Together, we'll reflect on how intentional measurement can sharpen focus and drive meaningful outcomes for students. slide deck ● Session 3: Join Jeff Evans for a workshop based on Susan Berkhardt's work and book (Using Data for Continuous Improvement). We will examine ways to build comprehensive systems based on identifying multiple measures of data, triangulation of trusted assessments/measures, analytical structures, and establishing continuous improvement strategies.
