Chicago 1977-1986

Jamari Roberts and Luderious Keyshawn were two of the closest friends almost considered each other brothers they grew up together they at this time they are 15 and full of stupid ideas. Being drug runners for a set of the gangster disciples selling small grams of weed on the corner of their street in Chicago. They lived in an apartment on 23rd southbridge. They would normally hangout with their friends from the apartment and neighbors just outside. When both of them were at the age of 15 they were told by one of their older homies K10 to come to an alley where they would be met by multiple gang members. They were jumped into the gang that day then had tattoos to represent their set. The next level for them was getting into the operation their gang was working on. They ran Crack all through the hoods and ghettos. They became a problem for the feds and then they began investigating them and their gang. They tried arresting a few of the members the cases didn't hold up in court though. After multiple attempts by the feds they just couldn't get any solid proof and embarrassed they took this loss and the gang was off the law enforcement map. By the time they were 16 the Jamari and Luderious found themselves within a deadly gang war for territory. They were just kids who didn't know how to kill a man but were forced to learn quickly. They were taken onto a drill where they popped pills to numb themselves out before shooting at some of their opps. Luderious opened fire, shooting 9 bullets One opp named Fat T was shot in the head and he ended up passing away. Jamari being stronger controlled recoil better he aimed out of the car with a mac 10 and sprayed down the other opp named slim the total bullets he shot were around 27 he died with an unknown amount of bullet wounds, one of them escaped with his life but was grazed by a few bullets. That day they learned what it was like to murder and knew they would never be the same. Weeks later Luderious's mother finds a few ounces of weed in his closet while she was putting his clothes away, they had an argument and he was kicked out of the house. With tensions getting heavy the block getting hot the two knew they had to leave Chicago eventually. Over this amount of time they made a lot of dirty money doing hits for the crew stealing from houses and cars and selling mass amounts of drugs. Luderious was sent to his aunties house in New york where he could live there. Jamari was left in Chicago to pursue this deadly war. While Luderious was in the city with new opportunities and a new life he decided to go back to what he knows the best. He started hanging out with some people he gathered a few men he could trust and started the set under the gang he was originally a part of. The walkdown disciples are a set of the gangster disciples in New York Luderious then began operations at this time. Luderious sold various drugs to establish himself while also hitting licks and began building his gang with some starting members that would stick with him for the rest of his life. Jamari had enough money to sustain himself in New York and got a plane ticket. He had one of his friends drive him to the airport and disappeared from Chicago without a trace. Days later Jamari and Luderious link up with each other and begin. They're primary way of making money and being acquainted with other gangsters in the city is doing licks for money. Various criminal organization and gangs pay them to rob, murder, steal, vandalize, and beat people but where will this lead them?