

A statement from the Office of Representative PhlebotinumEddie on National Park Expansion

All too often, both the US Green Party and our allies around the world are treated as any other socialist party. While we are most certainly made up of primarily socialists and leftists, our environmentalist message cannot be forgotten. Not only in the areas of climate and environmental justice, but also in more primitive forms of environmentalism. My recent bills submitted for establishing two new national parks harkens back to just that kind of environmentalism; to the environmentalism of the 20th century that foreran this green revolution we are having today. To the commitment of original pioneers of conservation and natural resource preservation like President Theodore Roosevelt. We must bring more attention to the beautiful landmarks and preserves that deserve more recognition like the unique volcanic formation the Craters of the Moon, in Idaho territory, or the incredibly biologically diverse Big Thicket in Eastern Texas. Elevating these areas to national parks will not only help bring more attention to the natural wonders on display in these locations, but also bring more attention and tourism to neighbouring communities. I am pleased to introduce these bills to congress with the bipartisan support of my fellow representatives /u/NAM_69_Reenactor (R) and /u/scribba25 (D).
