Personality: Ronnie is a very casual and rowdy person, he enjoys skating and loitering at stores and doesn't like older male authority figures whether that be his late Stepfather or the police in his area, he's confident in his skills and has a hopeful outlook on life. Some people look up to him because of his carefree, extroverted and exciting personality and despite the shit he's been through during his childhood, he still sees the good in most things and people.

Backstory: Ronnie was born in Hawthorne California to a single mother so growing up he resented his father who was not present in his life. In school he was bullied for being masculine despite being born female and got into a lot of fights with the other kids which sent him into counseling to try and sort out his violent and sometimes disturbing behavior. At around 16 his mother had found a new partner but Ronnie was hesitant to accept the man as his stepfather since it felt weird to him that this person he wasn't close with at all was suddenly barging into his home and he'd start arguing with his mother claiming that her partner was full of shit. Ronnie was upset about the attention that he thought was being taken away from him because of his step father and in 2002 he severely injured him by pushing him down the stairs. He later died in hospital and Ron was cleared of any possible murder charges despite his mother not being on his side and when after the trials and the funeral he became very distant from his mother and isolated himself, staying outside late etc. This anti-social behavior soon led to him befriendng Harlyn Rosado whom he became very close with and saw her as an older sister. He ran away from home as Rosado offered to let him live with her in L.A. he awakened his stand when Bonnie stabbed him with the arrow
