

SUPER ORGANIC ART SHOW BY NATASHA KUDASHKINA

BIG BANANA

acrylic on canvas

22" x 28"

$4000

natashadesign.com

Bananas are more than food, they are playgrounds full of laughter and excitement, ice cream splits and pratfalls.

Little people darted everywhere. Some used the long strips of skin as slides and slid. One stood at the very tip, held her arms in triumph after a long, nearly impossible climb. Down below people worked. Their conversation was about how to distribute this giant fruit to as many little people as possible, quickly, before it became a big, bad banana. Bob the vendor even tried his hand making a business of it: banana ice cream.

Joy was in the air. Everyone who saw the banana, touched it, ate it, smelled it, was connected, and delighted.

It was a celebration not just of the banana but of life's potential, its surprises and abundance.

GIANT STRAWBERRY

acrylic on canvas

40" x 60"

$6500(sold)

natashadesign.com

As they gathered around the giant strawberry, they could not believe their eyes.

HUGE PEACH

acrylic on canvas

36" x 48"

$2350

natashadesign.com

The huge peach was discovered by a group of rock climbers who scaled it straight away. If they were drawn by its aroma or silky smooth fruit, you would not know for they didn't linger. They climbed directly to the pit and its catacombs, where they spelunked then rested, leaning against its smooth walls. A red haired woman passed by and cheered them on from far below.

GREAT KIWI

acrylic on canvas

18" x 18"

$850

natashadesign.com

The Great Kiwi rested like a portal to another world. Figures gathered in awe. Where did it come from? And where is its other half? No answers were forthcoming and the mystery remained, the kiwi at the centre of it all.

MANDARIN DREAM

acrylic on canvas

10" x 10"

$750

natashadesign.com

I had a dream that all my girl friends were on an adventure and we found a piece of mandarin. But guess what? It was huge! Bigger than a house. We sat and watched the sunset through it, suffused in its soft light. It was a beautiful time.

LYCHEE

acrylic on canvas

10" x 10"

$550

My dog sniffed the air, then pulled at his leash. "What is it, Max?" I asked, as he led me, tugging, through the forest. But then I smelled it too, a heavy perfume I couldn't quite place. Sun started to filter through the trees as we approached a meadow. When I saw it, I almost dropped the leash. A lychee fruit, four stories high. I closed my eyes, rubbed them, opened them again. It was still there. Who? How? At the time, I didn't know that giant fruits were appearing all over the planet, and it took many years for humankind to understand why.

COLOSSAL LEMON

acrylic on canvas

30" x 15"

$1650

natashadesign.com

Sure, when life gives you lemons, make lemonade, but what do you do with a COLOSSAL lemon, when a single slice is as big as a city? What do you do then??

DRAGONFRUIT SITE

acrylic on canvas

24" x 36"

$1850

natashadesign.com

He was the first one on-site this morning. It was still quiet, but he could hear the construction sounds in his head as he planned the next steps. There was a lot to do!

MELON MELT

acrylic on wood

24" x 24"

$950

(half proceeds to Médecins Sans Frontières)

natashadesign.com

The story of the melon had yet to be written and all the little boy knew is that he couldn't do it alone.

POMME DE TERRE

acrylic on canvas

48" x 48"

$8000

natashadesign.com

They fought and fought, divided against themselves, until they arrived into the cold shadow of the potato. One by one, they turned to it, realized it was enough to feed them, all their families, and they littered the ground with the uniforms they no longer needed.

PINEAPPLE PARTY

acrylic on canvas

78" x 50"

$10500

natashadesign.com

They gathered around the pineapple, waiting for it to ripen. The party was growing each minute, and would go on for many days.

THE PEAR

acrylic on canvas

35" x 45"

$3000

natashadesign.com

The perfume of the pear brought them all running. It was time. They would need more horses.

ONE APPLE A DAY

acrylic on canvas

30" x 30"

$4000

natashadesign.com

This good doctor decided to use the apple for his practice. It was a green one, tart and crisp, easy to keep clear. He managed to haul up everything he needed. The hardest part was getting the patients to come up and come down, but it didn't stop them from lining up.
