			 While the bird was enjoying the mango, Aunt Ruby emerged from her room and, with a cry of surprise, called out, "Look, it's my parrot come back! He must have missed me!" With a loud squawk, the parrot flew out of her reach and, perching on the nearest rose bush, glared at her and shrieked in my aunt's familiar tones: "You're no beauty! Can't talk, can't sing, can't dance!" Aunt Ruby went ruby-red and dashed indoors. But that was not the end of the affair. The parrot became a frequent visitor to the garden and veranda, and whenever it saw Aunt Ruby, it would call out, "You're no beauty! Can't talk, can't sing, can't dance!" The parrot had learnt to talk after all! Ruskin Bond squawk made a shrill cry Different kinds. The loud, harsh made by a parrot a squawk. The short, quick, high-pitched made by a parrot when they are a different chatter. Birds back, caw, quack and pigeons	return ? 5. How the Aunt react to see a parrot again ? 6. 15	(24/04/25)	2. The parrot who won't talk	 Can't talk! Can't sing, can't dance! These words Aunt Ruby would turn the unfortunate parrot, and especially of everyone from his ornamental cage at one side of Granny's bungalow in north India. In distant days, almost everyone—Indian or European—parakeet, or "lovebird" as some of the smaller ones were, these birds became great toppers, or rather mimics, the entire mantras (religious chants) or shloka to the children of the house, such as "Study, child, study!" (the benefit of boys like me. Don't be greedy!) expressions were, of course, picked up parrot over a period of time, after many years by some member of the household and taken on the task of teaching the bird unfortunate parakeet, a parrot with a monotonous voice, that they in the conversation lots of other
