Decorating a bare wall on a tight budget does not mean you will have to use bad-looking wall art or canvas prints. You can find affordable and classy looking photos on canvas if you search for them on the net and at some art stores and galleries.

There are also other ways to decorate a blank wall aside from hanging canvas wall art. Check some of your options below which will show you other types of wall decor and tips on how to prep your wall for decorating.

Before hunting for artwork for your walls, determine what color will go with your wall paint and other things like upholstery and carpet. Take measurements to help you find the right size for your wall decor. Consider the height of your wall too aside from the width.

If your wall needs repainting, then this is the perfect opportunity to make the colors of your wall art and wall paint match. Consider other pieces in the room before deciding on your wall paint. Changing existing furniture will be an expensive way to decorate our walls just so everything will match.

Search for vintage wall decor such as old cross-stitch art, quilts, and vintage posters. You can find these at flea markets, yard sales or thrift shops. You might also be able to find quite a few on the internet on auction sites or online home furnishing stores.

Visit at galleries, home stores and art stores in your area. Even if you will not purchase anything right away, seeing various types of artwork will be interesting. You can look for more of the interesting items online when you get home.

Look for paintings and canvas prints that you can hang on your walls. Other things like metal art or wood art can also be used as wall decor. Check your store room for old interesting items you can use as decorations. Scour through old photographs that you can also frame and hang in groups.
