

What was meant to be an inspiration editorial at Château de Queille in France, very quickly (and lovingly) turns into a romantic elopement right before our eyes! Ambre and Romain didn't think they they would ever have a real wedding because of money, the coronavirus pandemic + other private reasons. However, they were more than happy to participate in a photoshoot for the fun of the experience.

Knowingly, Rubijoy Wedding Planning, Pattie Fellowes Photography and the other artists behind this inspiration flipped the script – producing the day as if it were A + R's real elopement! Vows were exchanged, and we blame it entirely on the captivating charm of the French countryside.

Our bride, Ambre, starts the dreamy day wearing this SKYE dress from Marielle Maury. The soft + romantic gown is made of organic silk crepe and silk embroidered with organic cotton for the bodice. The knotted organza top with its ample sleeves plays with

transparency and softness...a dreamy fit for this Château elopement! The 18th century Château is a tranquil and secluded place, surrounded by forests, meadows + a river. Perched on rocks, it overlooks breathtaking views! For good reason, it's beautifully restored to maintain its history, but fresh + welcoming. Idyllic spot for a wedding in the French countryside!

After dinner, the couple is served their wedding cake, by Marie Arvidsson. Here is a light lemon sponge with layers of fresh raspberry coulis + lemon curd with meringue crumbs. In true French countryside fashion, it's decorated by seasonal lavender for a sublime sensation!
