

Five Omissions that will lead your company or Market to Bankruptcy.

1. The Company becomes decapitalized

2. If a business or market, for example, has an income of £50 per day on the three days it is open to the public, it receives £150 in total income; If the cost of those three days of operation is £80, there would be a balance of £70 pounds that could go to the bank as a deposit and there would be a profit. For any future emergency. Note: but wrong and innocent and presumably the board of directors of that company or Market. Due to lack of experience, they decide to pay salaries to workers and authorize expenses without the Market or the company operating on those days and not being open to the public, the only fate that awaits this company will be closure and imminent bankruptcy. Mathematics doesn't lie and  $1 + 1 = 2$ . if this company or Market has a location that it rents for two hours on a day that the rest of the market or company is not open to the public and its only gross income for that day is a value of £40 and the operating expenses of that premises require payment of staff, electricity, gas, salaries and for example. The total operating expenses for this day are £160 and the profit is only £40. It would imply a loss of £120 pounds every day that it worked like this, and the monthly gap would be enormous, and an annual gap would be a disaster. And it would be the easiest way to take a company to collapse and complete bankruptcy.

3. If for some reason someone from the outside or external had bad intentions with the company or Market and was interested in its failure or closure or bankruptcy, they would try to divide the board of directors as the popular message says; divide and conquer.

4. This means that while they make the members of the board of directors entertain themselves by arguing and fighting among themselves about things that make no sense. No one is going to look at or review the accounts and they will not know how the money from said company or Market is presumably running out. They will only tell you in each board meeting they have. that the company or market has losses. since the job of an accountant is only to report on the status of accounts and balances and does not have any responsibility in the administration or making of decisions that could presumably be taken in an erroneous and involuntary manner and how they have them divided arguing about things without In this sense, no one will take a deep look and check which presumably and innocently may be the key that is open and the error can be repaired in time and it is for this reason that any company or market is going bankrupt. Note for example. If a person has an open wound from an accident and it is not checked soon the person will bleed to death and die. The same would happen with any company or Market if the reason why the expense is greater than the profit is not reviewed. The only sure thing that awaits you is closure and bankruptcy.

5. The act of Love and the greatest Gift that a human being can give another human being company or project is to dedicate time to it. since he is giving her a second, a minute that she will never come back and get back.
