Lemonade Braids

Braids called after a popular summer beverage? What exactly is the point of this? We believe we know what's going on! Citrus braids are refreshing and tasty, tart and sweet, and they are quenching the thirst of thousands of women around the world who are "putting a ring" on their "bigger than life" spokes-icon, Beyonce.

What Are Lemonade Braids and How Do They Work?

Side cornrows became popular on Beyonce's "Lemonade album," which is where the style got its name. Lemonade braids are named after the album's title track. A braid "combo-deal" is what they are referred to as. You've got a little bit of cornrow mixed in with a little bit of Fulani style, a sprinkle of Goddess braids, and a whole lot of lay edges and feed-ins in this hairstyle. Lemonade braids may be made out of almost anything, but there is one fundamental Lemonade Law that should probably not be broken: the tresses must be braided to the side. Take a look at some of the top suggestions below!

#1: Lemonade Braids with a Lemon Tint

Lemon-yellow blonde braids provide a pop of color to this traditional look. A side part and tiny gold-toned hair cuffs complement your sun-kissed hair color, which helps to bring out the gold undertones in your skin tone and make you look radiant. A single teeny-weeny braid made of shells and beads adds a stunning finishing touch to this look.

Braids with a Cherry-Lemonade Flavour (#2)

Lemonade braids hairstyles that feature vivid and vibrant hues are among the most popular choices among women who are ready to take the trend to the next step. We prefer the moniker "Lemonade with a Cherry Twist" because the deep red color gives the braids a sweet and candy-like appearance that makes them look delicious enough to eat!

#3: Purple Passion Chunky Braids in a Flowing Style

If you're on the hunt for some gorgeous lemonade braids that are also colorful, look no further! Heavy and curly metallic purple goddess-style braids wrap around the head, forming a regal crown before falling to one side, like a veil, to complete the look.

#4: Lemonade Braids in the Traditional Style

Cornrow braids are exactly what we assume "Bey" had in mind when she requested her longtime hairstylist to come up with a new look for her Lemonade visual album. Since then, they've served as a model for classic lemonade braids by remaining simple and basic.

Braids with a thick wheel pattern are number five.

Nobody knows where she will come to a halt as she goes round and about. Intricate wheel-pattern braids frame the scalp in a cyclical crown, as shown in these large lemonade braids that spread outward from a central core. Face framing elements include laid borders and two peek-a-boo braids.

Skinny Braids in the Color of the Sunset (#6)

Tiny cobalt braids grow somewhat thicker as they expand outward, creating an eye-catching look that reminds us of a sunset in the late afternoon or early evening. The pop of brilliant blue extensions, as well as the flat, curled lay edges, create a striking contrast against the jet-black braided hair.

#7: Patterned Side Braids Across the Full Scalp

There appears to be no region of the scalp that has been left untouched by the plethora of braids that are twisting and swirling in every direction. Only a few of the many braids are adorned with pewter-tone metal hair clips, and two unexpected over-the-ear tresses on either side of the face help to balance out the hairstyle.

#8: Ponytail Braids with a Topknot

A lemonade braided ponytail, done here in a deep metallic purple, adds hair new twist to the standard side-swept look. In between the thick, curly braids that feed into a fanciful topknot with long, shining braids erupting from the center of the bun are tiny, thin braids that are placed between thick, curly braids.

Braids with beads and wraps (number 9)

The super-long extensions on these wine-colored Beyonce lemonade braids are accented with white hair string on a few of the braids, which adds to the overall effect. Almost everything, with the exception of two slender braids, is swept to one side, leaving two plaited braids that have been embellished with wooden beads and a single shell to flow forward over the other ear to complete the look.

#10: Braids in the front with a hair wrap

Everything about this goddess-braid inspired lemonade style is THICK, from the individual braid width to the curled placed edges to the individual braid width. We believe this is a look that works best on younger girls or teenagers because it is simple to maintain and quick to put on and take off.

#11: Triangular Braids that wrap around the entire head

On one side, four enormous lemonade braids snake around the head, while on the other, four additional jumbo braids drop straight down after being precisely separated into symmetrical triangle portions. It's a remarkable hairdo that is both sporty and tidy in appearance.

#12: Braids that are both thick and thin

Not sure whether to make your lemonade braids thick or thin? We've got you covered. You won't have to if you choose a hairdo that has everything. One medium-sized braid serves as a part line, dividing the scalp portions into two sections with the other. A hefty braid is followed by a narrow braid, and they all look stunning when paired with electric-pink hair extensions to complete the outfit!

Golden Swirl Lemonade Braids are number thirteen on the list.

Lemonade braids that are sleek and simple are delightfully enhanced when they are weaved into golden extensions, as shown here. The braid pattern, which curves softly around the crown of the head, is attractive and sophisticated (not to mention rather simple to put in!). The finishing touches are provided by braided cuffs and placed edges.

Crochet Braids in a Skinny Curvy Style (#14)

Mini-braids are a great option if you're looking for something different from the famous huge lemonade braids to the side. Women with incredibly thin or fine hair will benefit from this style, which is intricate and uber-skinny, and it is particularly effective. Rose-gold extensions give a certain "something" to your look.

#15: Updo with Lemonade Braids in a Thin Style

A hot alternative if you live or work in a hot area or a stressful setting; keeping your hair in an updo will always keep you cool and comfortable. To further dress up the ebony braid hue, add some wooden or ivory beads to the ends at the ends of each braid.

#16: Geometric Blonde Cornrows with a Twist

Anyone who believes that cornrows must always be worn from the front to the back has obviously never seen this innovative pattern. Small metallic blonde braids are artfully placed around the head to form a geometric spiral that wraps around the top of the head. In terms of jewelry or hair accessories, you really don't need anything else because the hair color has everything you're looking for!

#17: Loose Cornrows with Side Partings

If you've become tired with all the lemonade braided designs that end with a sweep to one side of the head, you might prefer a hairstyle where the braids cascade down on both sides of the head instead. It's a conventional take on a new hot favorite, complete with a well-defined side part and a plethora of thin cornrow braids.

Cornrows that have been side-parted should be saved.

Lemonade Braids Are So Cute!

#18: Skull Cap Braids with a Gold Tone

The circular braid patterns of these traditional lemonade braids would be perfect for "Yonce," as she is affectionately known among her tight group. The super-long braids are fashioned into a duplicating look that is fairly evocative of the original Lemonade style, and they are gathered at the crown of the head.

Hairstyle #19: Braids with Diamond Goddess and Lemonade

If you take the thickness of a goddess braid and divide the scalp into a diamond pattern, then you can add some mini-cornrow accent braids to create an Aztec-inspired lemonade side braids look. In addition to being bright and fashionable, it's also the most effective method of creating geometric designs with nothing more than artfully braided hair.

#20: Skinny Braids that go back and forth

Lemonade braids that are half back and half forth are quite attractive and are ideal for a woman who favors slender braids to big braids. A hairstyle like the one seen here can be constructed with or without braid wraps or other accessories, and it can be worn with or without braid wraps or other embellishments.

In the event that you're a woman who appreciates showcasing her hair in a unique and beautiful method, lemonade braids should be at the top of your hairstyle want list. These braids are not only functional and visually appealing, but they are also a popular and trendy solution for giving your stressed hair a break from the regular stresses of rigorous processing and styling.

Lemonade braids are available in a variety of styles and sizes, ranging from micro-braids to cornrows to huge goddess braids. You can accessorize them with bright colors, beads and baubles, jewels and string, and one-of-a-kind hair cuffs, for example. Whatever the case, there are more than enough appealing and flexible lemonade braids hairstyles to fill an enormous refreshing pitcher!
