Ah, the thrill of mass emotions. Come to Times Square to hear ethnic drumming bands, see a little black girl tap dance and join a singalong of This land is your land. [...] We know an indigenous people or two who could have a say in the question of whose land is this anyway, but who's counting? What matters are the activities for kids, recycling Olympics, Adopt-a-pet, an eco fashion show on a solar stage, sustainability seminars and more.

Welcome to Rethink Gold!

The original description went as follows: "Handmade jewelry for everyday wear, made of gold, silver, pearls, gemstones". As we're all grown up now, we can safely mention that all of these are made by Jerusalem-based and Kiev-born designer Irina B., and these rings (and more) are one of a kind. Some are inspired by the Orient, i.e. Tibetan and Japanese traditions, others - by European artists, such as Klimt, Kandinsky and Klee, with some Čiurlionis thrown in for good measure. Still others are made with the city of Jerusalem in mind (see our double rings of Heavenly and Earthly Jerusalem). A salute to Judeo-Christian aesthetics, a nod to the East, an art album coming alive and worn on your fingers: Art Nouveau and beyond, wherever the artist's fantasy might take you - who knows what she'll come up with next? These can be intended as engagement rings, as presents for anniversaries or important occasions, here to establish a new tradition of giving a gift of magic rings.
