Protesters Against Yesterday News Back in Full Force

by: Dalton

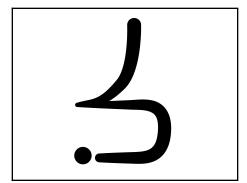

The new radical anti Yesterday News group currently going by the name "Exemplars", attacked a restaurant named Yesterday's Burgers. They claim that they did it because it has the word "Yesterday" in it, which means it is allegedly a front for News. The Yesterday creator of Yesterday News was outraged because of the Exemplars' ignorance to the absence of the apostrophe in Yesterday News.

I know, right? It's radical." He then, after eating three buckets of KFC, said, "If you eat enough of it, eventually, it will replace cancer cells, with microscopic fried chicken wings. So, if you eat enough, your cancer will be cured." Though what if the microscopic fried chicken isn't good for you? Well, Professor Pin-Appley has an answer for that, as well.
