

Second graders at Patch Elementary are introduced to the phenomenon that rocks are not all the same. They investigate several kinds of rocks and begin to understand the properties of rocks. Students observe rocks using hand lenses, they sort rocks and describe rocks. Students use a mixture of different-sized rocks to separate using a series of three screens to identify sizes of rocks. This will build students foundational understanding as they explore how rocks change, the Earth's surface changes over time.

