

PIGLETFOROV'S SCRIPT GUIDE

I'll explain a few alternative script formats you can use if you're planning to commission a comic from me. These are based on my personal preferences and aren't meant to be the 'official' way to write a comic script.

1. Short Story Type

“Beneath a silver moon, the little mermaid watched the prince dance on the ship’s deck, adoring the sound of his singing voice. Then—lightning cracked across the sky, and the prince fell into the sea. Without thinking, the little mermaid dove. Through the crashing waves and foam, she cut through the water like a blade. His body sank, limp and weightless. She reached him, wrapping her arms gently around his chest and pulling him toward the surface. As she cradled him above the waves, her heart pounded—not from fear, but from a feeling she didn’t yet understand.”

For this type of script, I'll need some extra info from you:

- an estimated number of pages you’re aiming for (this might change a bit depending on the script),
- character reference images,
- background reference images (if you have any).

2. Comic Script Type

Page 1

Panel 1

Wide shot of the ocean at night. A full moon glows above. The ship is lit with warm lights, music drifting from it. A mermaid looking at the prince’s silhouette from afar.

Panel 2

Close-up of the little mermaid underwater, gazing up at the prince with awe in her eyes.

Caption: It feels like an unreachable love... he’s so close, yet so far.

Panel 3

Sudden lightning slashes across the sky. The prince stumbles near the edge of the ship.

SFX: CRACK!

Panel 4

The prince falls overboard into the dark water, arms flailing.

Page 2

Panel 1

The little mermaid dives in instantly, slicing through the water with determination.

Caption: Maybe it's a sign from above that my wish will come true.

Caption 2: But it's a little rude, isn't it?

Panel 2

Underwater view of the prince sinking, unconscious, eyes closed, clothes floating.

Panel 3

She reaches him, gently wrapping her arms around his chest.

Caption: I want him alive, singing at me. Not this way, in this lifeless body.

Panel 4

They break through the surface together. She holds his head above the water, eyes filled with emotion.

Caption: I need him alive!

For this type of script, I'll need some extra info from you:

- character reference images,
- background reference images (if you have any),

3. Poem Type

"Beneath a silver moon so high,
She watched him dance beneath the sky,
His voice—a song the stars adored,
A melody her heart implored.

But then the skies began to roar,
A flash of light, the heavens tore.
He slipped, he fell into the deep,
The sea now cradled him in sleep.

She dove without a second thought,
Through waves and foam, the prince she sought.
She swam as swift as lightning's call,
To catch him in his silent fall.

His body limp, the light grown dim,
She wrapped her arms around his limbs.
And as she brought him back to air,
A spark had bloomed she wasn't aware.

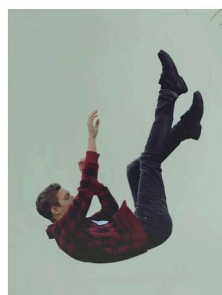

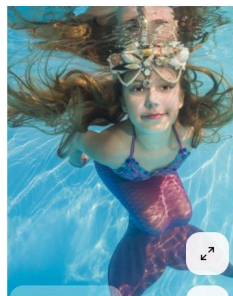

Her heart now raced, her soul set free—
Not fear, but love beneath the sea."

For this type of script, I'll need some extra info from you:

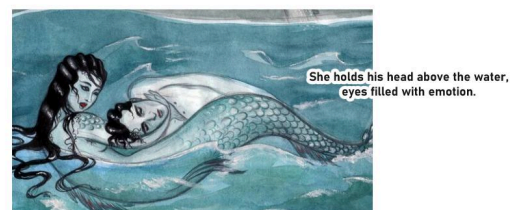

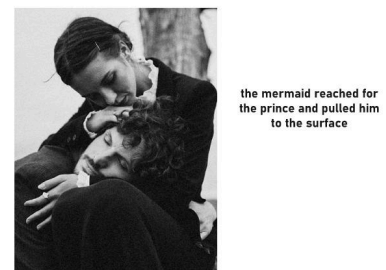

- an estimated number of pages you're aiming for (this might change a bit depending on the script),
- character reference images,
- background reference images (if you have any).

4. Picture Reference Type

PAGE 1

PAGE 2

With this method, you can give me additional script details and I'll adjust them to match the images you provide.

5. Hybrid Type

Of course you may show me the hybrid version of your script, with a bit picture here and there, or additional poem, etc.

If you have questions, please don't be hesitate to hit me on DM (twitter/X @pigletforov).