

SL: What do you think Carlos?

How's it going Carlos,

I came across your "Federal reserve vs banks video" (Made me chuckle quite a bit actually.)

You see Carlos, I can see the hard-work and effort that goes into providing effective trading strategies for your audience.

And I understand how much time the content-side of things may take.

That's why I went ahead and whipped up three disruptive emails designed to drive more traffic towards your premium discord group.

You can essentially implement these right now into your email list.

Name: Alex

Gender: Male

Age: 22

Appearance: Alex is a young man with short, curly hair and glasses. He dresses casually, often wearing a hoodie and jeans. He carries a notebook and a pen with him at all times, indicating his desire to take notes and learn.

Personality: Alex is an ambitious and curious individual who wants to learn how to trade in the stock market so he can achieve financial freedom and independence. He is a quick learner and enjoys studying and analyzing data. However, he is struggling with some aspects of trading and feels overwhelmed at times.

Background: Alex is a recent college graduate with a degree in finance. He has a good understanding of the financial markets but has never traded stocks before. He decided to start trading on his own to supplement his income and gain practical experience in the industry.

Interests: Alex is interested in reading books on personal finance, investing, and technology. He also enjoys playing video games and watching movies in his spare time.

Challenges: Alex's biggest challenge is understanding technical analysis and how to read stock charts. He is also struggling with emotional control and discipline when it comes to making trades. He finds it hard to control his emotions when a trade goes against him, and he often makes impulsive decisions. Additionally, Alex is concerned about the risks associated with trading, and he worries about losing money.

Desired Outcome: Alex wants to become a successful stock trader who can generate consistent profits in the market. He wants to have the financial freedom to travel, start a business, and invest in real estate. Alex's ultimate goal is to achieve financial independence and retire early so he can pursue his passions and make a positive impact on the world.
