

Pollution problem in Chiang Mai

Our main story tonight concerns, tourism, specifically in Chiang Mai. Since ever covid became a thing in 2020 which I wont accept that its 4 years ago, destroyed the tourist sector of income for a good 2 years, we things start to get better, it also kinda isnt. The main problem is about the forgien tourist or as we called them farang. They came with a different additude than usual. They dont wear mask, they dont follow the rules, do whatever they want, and when you tried to call them out, they will say you are unfriendly and hostile. Its like when your next door nancy came visit your house, everything is fine until she; goes inside your private room, eating your leftover fried rice from yesterdays dinner, and takes a gigantic dump in your toilet without flushing. You tried telling her, but she goes back home to relatives bashing you, and now everyone in the neighborhood is giving you a stare. And you can do nothing about it. So most of the local just have to deal with it or they will loose a slice of the customer. Which is dwindling to begin with. If you went to a tourist spot in CM, half of the people there are local. Which is not to say is a bad thing. But cmon a pizza with half of the toppings are pineapples, you can do better. Another cons with the current time is that we doesnt have enough things to attract people to travel to. People from Bangkok wont go all the way up to visit the province theyve been a dozen time. Our neighbor province? Oh have fun driving up mountains, 700 turns for a view and a street, oh how worth it is that? Oh yeah the forgeiners can come, oh yeah right... Nancy. But on the brighter side, its not all doom and gloomy, room and dookie. Many businesses are hitting gold with the local customers. Since CM especially the is a densely populated place. So with the right strategies, you can strive in this city with local customers. With time and no pandemic, the new culture blend with new generations may be the force to attract your neighbors to come visit your house again.
