Subject line: Your unfair advantage can continue upgrading many more potentially genius minds!

Hi Sania,

I was looking through your company website and social media accounts and found your content impressive.

While I was looking at your courses, especially under Super-Learning, I can't help but be amazed at the achievements that instructors like you have earned.

I feel confident that I'd benefit from a speed learning course taught by a multiple title world champion and Guinness World Record holder like Emma Alam or a respected researcher and influencer like you.

By establishing credibility and authority within the learning and memory training industry, your company has an unfair yet favorable advantage that many other businesses could only wish to have.

There are a few things I found that could significantly help you further increase your reach.

I'm confident your company newsletter can greatly benefit from having a 'thank you' letter sequence sent to new subscribers.

This will provide you a more personalized approach to your subscription newsletter, helping you maintain and upscale a loyal follower base while attracting new potential customers.

Some of the biggest names in the learning and memory training industry such as Jim Kwik and Anthony Metivier have used this same strategy to maintain a huge customer base and attract new customers to their products.

I have attached a sample of my 'thank you' letter sequence below to help you out.

I have other samples which I can offer you for your subscription newsletter and Instagram page.

Would you like to further check out what I have on offer?

Thanks and kind regards,

Hans Reginald Natividad

Subject Line: Succeeding in the modern world's fast-paced reality

Hi (user), Sania here.

First off, I want to thank you for having me and my team as part of your life's journey.

The world continues to move at such a fast pace. Change is always happening everywhere,

Information keeps moving and growing rapidly, and so you must be able to keep up and get ahead at all times.

Question is: how can you move at such a pace?

My team and I believe that the future belongs to those who can not only learn fast but also apply their knowledge immediately in whatever they do.

Every Tuesday, we will share with you insights about topics that matter to you, including topics on the human mind, our cognitive abilities, and even secrets that only the best and most well-trained memory gurus like us know and have perfected.

In case we haven't met before, I'm Sania Alam, a long-time educator and advocate of increased mental literacy through Super-Learning.

I look forward to helping you take advantage of maximizing your greatest asset to living your best life: the human mind.

Before I go, I'd like to ask you what your learning goals are and where you currently are at achieving them.

All the best,

Sania

Subject Line: The world will not get slower anytime soon!

Hey, (user),

Let's face reality: the modern world moves rapidly every day.

If you don't move fast enough, you'll be overwhelmed with so much information,

Just like how you missed out on my last email.

Our team is ready to provide you every resource we have so we can help you succeed in this fast-paced world.

At the end of the day, the choice of being successful by achieving your life goals remains within your hands.

Now I suggest you do two things:

First, do answer this question: "What learning challenge frustrates you the most at this moment?"

Afterwards, do check out my previous email.

There you'll discover how my team can help you resolve your answer to the first question.

All the best,

Sania
