DESCRIPTION

+Straightforward +Sympathetic +Uncomplaining -Meloncholic -Enervated -Lackluster

Simply going on to seeing tomorrow is his current motivation. All he wishes is to simply be present. Dul is the type to put little to no effort to make himself stand out, stepping away from the light if someone else craves it. He would rather help others achieve their goals and satisfy their ambitions than his own, which he doesn't have very many of. Dul doesn't care much about how he's perceived, however if someone wishes to rely on him, he'll do his best to fulfill any given task. He will have his moments at times, whether witty or charismatic, but he will think nothing of it and will deem them not notable. If you were to ask him "What's your plans for tomorrow?" he would reply "Hm, not sure, what about you?" If you were to ask him "How are you?" He will simply reply "Not sure, my day hasn't started." When it comes to anything interesting about himself, simply nothing comes to mind when he tries to speak. At times Dul feels a tinge of pity for himself however this is something only he himself can both sabotage himself with and rid himself of. Part of him questions his purpose, yet doesn't make an effort to act on it. Part of him questions his loneliness, yet doesn't make an effort to change that. One can only help themselves if they choose to take the advice given to them.
