Lee, Ursula. Section C. "Taiwanese's Preference for Traveling Abroad- Take Japan as an Example."

The tourism industry holds a tremendous benefit in Taiwan's economy; consequently, foreign and domestic tourists visiting Taiwan are both essential. However, it has been found that Taiwanese people have been inclined to travel abroad instead of domestically in recent years, which will contribute to several problems in economic conditions. The study aims to identify the background information behind the trend that Taiwanese people prefer to travel abroad to Japan, indicating the potential reasons for it, the impacts on Taiwan's tourism industry, as well as the appropriate attitudes and measures dealing with the phenomenon the Taiwanese government should adopt. The study is done by analyzing the data collected from respondents through an online questionnaire.
