ABSTRACT

Abstract consists of a maximum of 100 words, no need to indent at the beginning of the sentence. Type in Cambria font (with Italic style), size 12 with spaces 1. Abstract contains a brief description of the background, the results of the discussion and a brief conclusion. The substance of the abstract is includes and describes the contents of the text in general.

Keywords: Keywords consist of three to five words or phrases, use Cambria font (with Italic style) size 12 spaces 1.5, and are written in alphabetical order, which reflects the important words or phrases of the script

A. INTRODUCTION (CAMBRIA 12 1,5 Bold, UPPERCASE)

The introduction is typed based on the general rules of writing, namely using a Cambria font measuring 12 with a space of 1.5 and set Remove Space Before Paragraph and Remove Space After Paragraph. Typical manuscripts are typed with paper margins (Margin) 3, 4, 3, 3. 3. At the beginning of each paragraph, always overhang with five beats. The introductory substance consists of the background and formulation of the problem without using the subheading model. So that the background and formulation of the problem are a unit in the Introduction section. The introduction begins with a description of the background of why the author takes a topic in a certain theme to be published. Every sentence or paragraph that is not a personal opinion must be accompanied by a citation in the form of a footnote (Bodynote). The references used should be references that have been published at least 5 years ago, so that the article made really contains scientific novelties. An example of using Bodynote is like this.

“... so that in practice, the law must be understood as something fundamental and a guideline in behavior. (Purwoleksono, 2015)”

One paragraph consists of three to five sentences. Paragraphs should not exceed a page. A dot is the last character on a page. The end of a paragraph or sentence, the end of a page, like this example (to make the manuscript look neat).

Meanwhile, the formulation of the problem itself is located at the end of the paragraph before stepping on the Discussion section. It can be started with a paragraph that reaffirms the title, then continues with an introductory sentence before the formulation of the problem. The problem formulation is written in the form of a question sentence. It can be merged into paragraphs or it can also be formed into problem formulation points. The formulation of the problem is highly correlated with the parts in the manuscript, including points in the discussion and the conclusion point.

B. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION (CAMBRIA 12 1.5 Bold, UPPERCASE)

Results and discussions are part of a manuscript that contains the results of research or analysis on a topic raised. The First Discussion generally discusses legal issues (or those that intersect with the law) in a more concrete and comprehensive way than the issues presented at a glance in the Introduction. It is completely re-described about philosophical problems, juridical problems and sociological problems that underlie a problem that is raised as a topic.

While the second discussion generally contains solutions offered by the author or solutions that have been applied to a problem raised. It can also be in the form of an analysis of the author based on pre-existing theories and concepts.

The discussion should ideally have 2/3 of the total number of pages in the manuscript. So in this case, IJAR requires a minimum of 5 (five) pages, so the number of discussion pages is at least three or three and a half pages. The discussion is written based on general rules as in the first paragraph of this template. If the author wants to quote directly "with a maximum number of lines of three lines, then the author only needs to give quotation marks as in this sentence". However, in the event that the author wants to quote directly with a number of lines that is more than five lines, then it is possible to use a sentence model that all overhang five beats with a space of 1, as in the example below:

"This is an example if the writer wants to make a direct quote which is more than three lines. After this example citation, the author is required to give a blank line one enter, provided that the spacing is 1.5 and the font size is 5pt (see example, hover over the bottom of this citation. After that, the writer can continue with a new paragraph or continue with the previous sentence."

Subheadings are created in order like this example (CAMBRIA 12, Bold, Capitalize Each Word, using the order 1, 2, 3, etc.)

1. The subtitle child will be created like this (CAMBRIA 12, Sentence case, using the order a, b, c, etc.). Bold is an optional condition.

a. The grandchildren of the subtitles will be created like this (CAMBRIA 12, Sentence case, using order 1), 2), 3), etc.)

1) The subheadings will be created like this (CAMBRIA 12, lowercase, using the order a), b), c), etc.)

a) The great-grandson of the subtitle will be created like this (CAMBRIA 12, lowercase, using the order i, ii, iii, etc.). If there are still offspring, you can use (1), (a), (i), and so on.

2. This is an example of the second subheading

The model of writing laws and regulations is released to the author as long as it is consistent in its use. The editorial suggested the mention of full nomenclature for the writing of laws and regulations. For example, Law Number 1 of 1974 concerning Marriage. However, it is also possible to write Law No. 1 of 1974 concerning Marriage, Law Number 1 of 1974, or the Marriage Law alone.

C. CONCLUSION (CAMBRIA 12 1,5 Bold, UPPERCASE)

The closing contains a conclusion to the discussion points that have been questioned by the author in the formulation of the problem. It is written based on general rules as in the first paragraph of the Introduction. The conclusion is tried to be concise, concise and as clear as possible and maximum of one page. It can also be accompanied by suggestions in a separate section (it is possible to use the "Conclusion" and "Suggestions" subheading models, if without the suggestion there is no need to use subheadings). Examples are as follows:

1. This first conclusion is an abstraction of the first point/subheading in the Discussion. Which the writer must adhere to the rules in this cheating style covering the substance and systematization of writing.
2. This second conclusion is the essence of the second point/subheading in the Discussion. The author can refer to laws and regulations with any model (full nomenclature is recommended) as long as it is consistent.
