Goodbye New Zealand!

My time in the public eye has been brief, I admit. But in that time, I have managed to implement real change -- namely, to my bank account. While it has since come out that I conducted a campaign of massive fraud, embezzling several millions of dollars, I have no regrets.

Indeed, if I could, I would do it all again.

By the time this message goes out to the country, I will already be overseas, forever hidden from New Zealand authorities with my obscene fortune.

If it is any consolation for the people of New Zealand, my new mansion features all the latest features -- for example? A heated swimming pool (indoors, of course), a private museum, and a liquid cooled Gaming PC with all the latest apps...

Our time together has been shorter than I'd wished, but you can sleep well knowing that the New Zealand dream is alive and well. Anybody, even a little poor girl from a shithole like Hamilton, can grow up to steal millions from the people of New Zealand. And considering what happened to the Maoris, isn't that what New Zealand is really about?

P.S. The next Minister for Foreign Affairs may wish to invite the Swiss Diplomats back to New Zealand, as I never did after expelling them. #SayonaraSwitzerland

P.P.S An Alliance affiliated staffer originally suggested the embezzlement scheme. I thought it sounded pretty good to me.
