Human tendency to communicate and interact is not a phenomenon that emerges recently. These symptoms appear in line with the development of human civilization. Whether for the motive of developing power, politics, survival, and slavery; it has been a long time since humans are out of their closest social environment. This is what leads to the movement of people from one region to another, both in the form of individuals/families and in large waves.

(Sub title 2) (Capitalized first letter, Times New Romans, Bold, Italic, 12 pt)

Research Involving Human Subjects

When reporting on research that involves human subjects, authors must declare that the investigations were conducted following the standards for best practices on ethical matters. As a minimum, a statement of an ethical statement reads as follows: "All subjects gave their informed consent for inclusion before they participated in the study." For non-interventional studies, for example, surveys, questionnaires, and social media research, all participants must be fully informed if the anonymity is assured. As with all research involving humans, ethical approval from an appropriate ethics committee must be obtained prior to conducting the study. If ethical approval is not required, authors must either provide an exemption from the ethics committee or are encouraged to cite the local or national legislation that indicates ethics approval is not required for this type of study. If the study reports research involving vulnerable groups, an additional check may be performed. The submitted manuscript will be scrutinized by the editorial office and upon request, documentary evidence should be supplied.

Lian Gouw was born in Jakarta in 1942 from a father who owned a weaving factory and a mother who was a housewife. The political situation in Indonesia around the 1960s made her and her family, as Chinese descendants, depressed. This condition made her, her husband and two children migrate to America (precisely in 1962).
