

Airplane Save The Date

by Kristi Delfino

A Luna and Chloe original design!

I am OVER THE MOON about how they turned out! I purchased the jet glider for $1.00 at Michaels. And while it has writing on each side of the pieces, I just flipped them over and used the undersides. There was a small stamp on the underside that said where it was made, but with a little sandpaper it came right off. Ooh, and the sandpaper is fabulous for fixing a mistake if made. Just wait for the ink to dry before you sand off, and don't rub too hard.

Here are the supplies that are needed for making a Save The Date plane

1. Jet Glider
2. Fine sandpaper (optional)
3. Letter and Number stamps
4. Stamp pad

I included some other items in the picture below that I used. However, you only need the four items above to actual make them.

All you really have to do is stamp...

I made a custom envelope for them, added a piece of chipboard to protect the plane from breaking in the mail, and then added some little details...

And voila! They are ready for take off...

Yet, don't think I stopped there...oh no! I tried to think of another, possibly easier way to use too. And here's is another option for you that I came up with...

For the banner you could either print it up (the easy way), or stamp it (a little more time consuming).

I glued the twine and a very thin piece of chipboard that I cut to the back of the banner. I didn't want the paper to bend or fold, so this gives it some stability. Also, I glued one piece of twine to the top of the back of the plane and one piece to the bottom to attempt to keep the banner straight when flying through the air. And even if you aren't having a destination wedding you can still use these if you love to travel, are a pilot of just for the fun of them!

There are so many ways to customize them too, and you could always use a colored stamp pad instead of black.

 Both the airplane save the date and the stitched key tags are my ORIGINAL designs. PLEASE do not copy, and pass it off as your own! I am sharing with you how to make the airplane save the dates out of kindness, return the favor. Thank you bunches!
