

Attention all AMS professionals - we need your help!

This year, over 200 students will be presenting a poster about their latest research projects at the AMS Student Conference in New Orleans on the evening of Sunday, January 10th (from 5:45-7:15pm). While some of them may be giving follow-up talks and poster presentations later on during the week, for many of our students this will be the only chance they have to show off their incredible, hard work from the past year. And that means it'll be the one of the only chances you have in New Orleans to get a sneak peek at what research ideas are brewing in the minds of our community's next generation of scientists and researchers!

The Student Conference Poster Session is open to the entire AMS to attend, but we're recruiting extra-enthusiastic members of the community to more directly engage with our students by volunteering to be Judges for our Poster Competition. We plan to highlight our top undergraduate and graduate poster presenters with awards, and we need your help to figure out who those deserving students and posters are! This year, we're going to maximize the amount of time you get to spend talking with students, and we're letting students know well ahead of time that they should be prepared to chat with you about their research.

If you think you can help us with judging our Poster Competition, please fill out this form. We hope you'll take this opportunity to interact with the future leaders of our AMS! If you have any questions, please contact Student Conference co-chair Daniel Rothenberg (darothern@mit.edu).

Thanks for your help in making this our best Poster Competition yet!

Sincerely,

AMS SCPC Co-Chairs

Daniel Rothenberg, Joshua Alland, and Kristy Carter
