Inventory and Weight

Characters can carry 10 + Physique as their inventory. In dire situations such as combat a roll is required to access one's inventory, the player must roll 2d6 to gain access to the item in the slot equal to the roll along with all items in the lower slots. The first 2 slots of a players inventory are quick access and do not require rolls.

Items have different Weight (WT) that affects how many slots they take up with a WT-2 Item taking up 2 slots, WT-3 taking 3 slots and so on. Items without a listed WT are assumed to be WT-1. Worn items like armor take up inventory space equal to their WT when worn, and continue to once their AP have been consumed. Very small items are WT-0. WT-0 items take up 1/5th of an inventory slot, as such you can keep five WT-0 items in 1 slot and access all of them when you roll the slot on an inventory roll.

Combat

Attack: Roll 2d6 + Melee or Accuracy if using a melee or ranged weapon)

Double 6's = Auto hit, maximum weapon damage

Melee Maneuvers : On hit you can deal your Brawling skill as damage instead to incur an extra effect

- Physique roll to knock prone if same size or smaller
- Finesse roll to retreat half your movement speed
- Physique to move yourself and your target forward 1 yard
- Finesse roll to disarm
- Physique or Finesse to grapple

Called Shots: You can make a ranged attack roll with 2 Trouble to target a specific limb on a target with a physical body to have an extra effect up to the GM

Dodge: 2d6 + Finesse - Armor WT
On success you may move 1 yard away from your attacker

Block: 2d6 + Physique (Requires Shield or Weapon with Guard trait)
Reduce damage from attack to 0 on success.
On a 1 or lower the shield or weapon breaks

Block w/ Improvised Shield: 2d6 w/ 3 Trouble (Requires some form of improvised shield)
Same as Block, but improvised shield breaks regardless of failure or success
Splinter Shield (Requires Shield)

If you roll a critical hit pick which weapon does max damage and roll for the other

Strain

Strain is the measure of physical exertion your character has endured. Characters can strain themselves to enhance their abilities, whether it's putting their back into an attack, Projecting your voice more or focusing while performing an activity. Characters can gain up to 5 Strain. You can perform multiple strain actions on the same turn but cannot use the same Strain action multiple times at once

Base Strain Uses

- Before you roll a melee attack, spend 1 strain to add +1 to hit chance
- Before you roll a melee attack, spend 1 strain to add +1 to damage
- Before you roll defense, spend 1 strain to add +1 to a defense roll

Break shield in response to attack. done before damage is applied

Parry

Reduce incoming damage by the damage roll of your melee weapon + your Brawling skill. Half of the excess damage is dealt to the attacker (minimum 1). If the incoming damage is higher than the parry roll the weapon used to parry breaks

Retreat

Use your action to move half your speed without triggering free attacks

Hop

Use all of your movement to move 1 yard without triggering free attacks

Free Attacks

Upon leaving a hostile enemy's melee attack range without Retreating they may attempt a free attack as a triggered action.

If you are ever trigger an attack from an enemy while mid movement you may defend as normal, however defending with block or parry will cost half of your movement

Dual Wielding

When holding a weapon in both hands you can make an attack with 1 Trouble, if the attack hits roll the damage of both weapons and take the highest result

- While moving add an extra 2 yards moved for every 1 strain spent
- Avoid gaining wounds while down

Damage and Dying

All player character's life is measured in Vitality, wounds and loss of life energy is measured in Damage. When Damage equals Vitality the player is Downed.

Wounds are harder to mend and cannot be healed by conventional means like resting or eating, usually heavy medical attention will be needed, Wounds are tallied along side damage and keep damage from being healed until the Wounds are healed first

Damage comes in many different types. Damage cannot be defended in certain ways depending on what type of damage is being inflicted

Armor and Ward is used to negate damage, each one negates Physical and non-physical damage respectively.

When your damage equals your Vitality you fall prone and begin to die.

At the start of every turn you are dying you must succeed a Resolve challenge or begin to slip closer to death taking a wound. You take 1 more wound for every failed Resolve challenge (1 Wound on the first fail, 2 on the second, Then 3 Wounds, etc.) until you resuscitate.

You cannot stand and must crawl at half your movement speed while dying

After 3 Successes you will resuscitate and heal 1 damage

If you receive healing while dying will resuscitate you

Damage you take while Dying all count as Wounds, once your Wounds equal your Vitality you die

If you begin to die while at maximum wounds you die instantly

If you take damage equal to your maximum health you die instantly

Injuries

Some wounds are so serious they result in injuries. Injuries take up inventory space and require very serious medical attention to treat. When you would gain an unspecified injury roll on the tables

Table 1

1. Arm Loss: Lose an arm of your choice
2. Broken Arm: Break an arm of your choice
3. Ruptured Organ: You gain 1 Wound whenever you strain yourself
4. Coughing Blood: Gain 2 Strain instead of 1 to activate abilities that require you strain yourself
5. Damaged Vision: 2 Trouble to rolls that involve seeing, If your vision is damaged again you lose your sight and become blind
6. Fractured Spine: -3 to inventory rolls, takes up two inventory slots instead of one

Table 2

1. Leg Loss: Lose a leg of your choice, your speed is halved
2. Broken Leg: Break a leg of your choice, your speed is halved
3. Ripped Muscle: 2 Trouble to physique rolls, if your physique bonus is positive do not add it to rolls
4. Concussion: 2 Trouble to wits rolls, your wits bonus becomes -1 unless lower
5. Cracked Rib: 2 Trouble to finesse rolls, your finesse bonus becomes -1 unless lower
6. Skull Fracture: 2 Trouble to resolve rolls, if your resolve bonus becomes -1 unless lower

Luck

Luck is awarded by the GM when a player pulls off a remarkable stunt, performs exceptional roleplay, or generally makes the game more fun for everyone. Luck can be used for the following actions

- Turn one of your failures into a success
- Add 1 Edge to an allies roll
- Whenever anyone rolls a d6 you may use Luck to make the roll a 6
- Ignore instant death

Rend: Target incurs a d3 bonus to attacks made against it, this bonus reduces by 1 at the end of each turn

Stun: Target must choose to move or attack instead of doing both for 1d3 turns

Firearm Traits

Magazine X: This weapon can use X ammo before it needs an action to reload

Misfire X: On an attack roll of X or lower the gun misfires. On a misfire roll a d6: on a 1-3 the gun explodes dealing damage to the user and destroying all ammo in the magazine, on a 4-6 the gun jams, one ammo is wasted and the user must use an action to clear the jam

Point Blank: No penalty to attacking adjacent targets. Adjacent targets take +1 damage, enemies outside of range take -1 damage

Brutal: If a pair of doubles are rolled on a 2Hd6 weapon add them for the final damage

Double Barrel: Spend 1 Ammo to give your weapon Brutal

Armor

Light: 1 Armor, WT-1

Medium: 2 Armor, WT-2

Heavy: 3 Armor, WT-3, + 1 Trouble on finesse rolls

Shield: 0H, Guard, WT-3

(Shields made of certain kinds of materials will always be destroyed by certain types of damage. For example wooden shields always burn if they block fire)

Spells

Spells are usually bound to books and cast when read. Unless noted otherwise a spell weighs 1 WT. Spells become exhausted after they've been cast, and recharge after a rest.

[p] = potency. All spells are potency 1 by default and can be enhanced to potency 2 with strain. You can always end a spell at will. You can strain yourself to add +1 to a spell casting roll, unless other wise stated a spell lasts for 10 minute.

CLASSES

1

Got Guts: Once per combat gain GUTS. As long as you have GUTS your attacks have +1 Edge; GUTS can be used to negate physical damage as armor, make an attack auto hit, or make an attack deal max damage. You regain spent GUTS on kill or by successfully performing a combat maneuver.

Combat Training: When you strain to add +1 to an attack's damage you add +1d3 damage instead. You can learn an additional Combat Art, you can learn another Combat Art at level 3

2

War Sense: On a successful attack or defense roll you may strain yourself against your target to do one of the following.

- Learn the targets max vigor and current damage

- Learn a weakness of the target

- Learn an attack or ability the target has

- Learn the target's defense

- Grant +1 Edge to you and your allies defense rolls against the target for 1d3+1 rounds.

You may perform each option once vs a target once per rest

3

Shake it Off: You may strain yourself as an action to heal damage with 1 strain equal to one point of damage healed. Once per rest you can strain yourself as an action to remove afflictions such as stunned or poison or heal 1d3+1 Wounds

4

Enhanced Guts GUTS can be used to negate ethereal damage as Ward and resist afflictions. GUTS can be spent to make two attack as a part of your attack action instead of one

VAGABOND

1

Sneaky: +1 Edge to stealth rolls. You make no noise moving across non-difficult terrain while walking. Once per round when you use a one or off handed melee weapon to attack a target who is unaware of your presence or engaged with another enemy you gain +1 Edge to the attack and +1 to the damage, this increases to +2 at level 3

Organized Inventory: Half of your inventory slots count as quick slots. You may strain yourself to retrieve items from your inventory as a free action instead of a quick action.

2

Expertise: Gain an extra profession. Choose a profession you have, you can auto succeed rolls related to this profession a number of times equal to your Vagabond level per rest. You can change which profession Expertise effects during a rest

3

Quick Thinking: You cannot be surprised, you always go first in combat unless you do not wish to. Items that require an action to throw, consume, deploy or otherwise require a quick action instead of a full action

4

Fleet Foot: You gain +1 to movement and ignore difficult terrain. As a quick action you can strain yourself to allow all allies within 25 yards of you that can see you to move up to their movement speed unless they're immobilized.

ARCANIST

Mana Blood: Once per rest as an action you can strain yourself to recharge a used spell book you're holding. +1 Edge to spell casting.

Magic Stench: You can smell magic. You can strain yourself to sense the stench of magic from out to 50 yards coming from magic books, magic items, the effects of magic or things created by magic for 10 minutes. If there are multiple sources of magic stench you can separate each one as distinct.

2

Spell Potency: You can strain yourself to increase the potency and casting roll of a spell to 3 times instead of once.

3

Runic Lobe: During a rest you can perform a ritual to memorize a spell from a book you own allowing you to cast the spell without holding the book once until next rest. You can only memorize one spell like this at a time.

4

Spell Link: While touching a book or scroll you can link to it as a free action. as long as the linked book is within 25 yards of you, you may cast it's spell as if you were holding it. The spell may either originate from you or from the book or scroll. You can only link to one book at a time

1

Circles: Choose a circle to be a part of. You gain the ability to create a charm once per rest if you perform a ritual that takes 10 minutes. All charms weigh 1/2

Sun: You can capture sunlight you are standing in into a glass bottle or jar and create liquid light.

- Liquid light gives off sunlight out to 10 yards
- Liquid sunlight is as refreshing and crisp as spring water. Upon drinking can cure poison and heal 2 damage
- When thrown the jar shatters into a burst of blinding sunlight out to 5 yards, the user makes an Aim roll against the Finesse of all creatures in the area blinding them on a hit.
- The liquid light stays potent until spilled or another bottle is made

Moon: You can capture moonlight you are standing in into a handful of sand, ash, dust, or some other fine powdered substance to create lunar dust.

- When held out wisps of dust will trail off in a path towards any undead within 100 yards.
- Lunar dust can obscure the living from the undead. The dust can be scattered out in a 3 yard radius cloud, all living in the cloud become invisible to undead for 30 minutes or until they attack or touch the undead
- Lunar dust can act as silver dust and make the ethereal physical. The dust can be scattered out in a 3 yard radius cloud making all incorporeal or spectral creatures in the cloud physical, unable to phase through objects, and vulnerable to physical damage.
- Lunar dust stays potent until scattered or another batch is made

Stars: While you can see a star in the sky you can bind starlight by carving a chunk of stone, bone, or wood into a star amulet.

- You can see and hear from this amulet if you close your eyes and hold your breath as long as the amulet is within 250 yards.
- Star amulets can be used to divine the future to an extent. Break your amulet to ask your DM a yes or no question they must answer truthfully
- You can use a star amulet to speak to the spirits of the dead; If you place a star amulet under the head or skull of a dead creature you may allow the creature's spirit to speak for 10 minutes. After 10 minutes or when the conversation ends the charm breaks.
- Star amulets retain their power until broken or another amulet is made

All charms can be sacrificed by their creator in order to grant a Protection to themselves or an ally within 10 yards. Protection acts as armor or ward, a target may only have one protection at a time. You have +1 Edge to casting spells related to your circle.

2

Resist Malady: As a quick action you can strain yourself to become immune to poison or disease for template number rounds in addition you can strain yourself template times per rest to purify 1 WT worth of rotten food or polluted water

3

Circle Casting: While holding a symbol of your circle such as a pendant or your circle charm you can cast spells related to your circle as long as you have the scroll or spellbook in your inventory

4

Halo: As an action you may target a creature you can see and sacrifice your charm to outline them with a shimmering halo of light and making them unable to hide and grant 1 Edge to all attacks and defense rolls against the creature for 1 minute. You and any of your allies may make their next attack or defense roll against an outlined creature automatically succeed, this breaks the halo and ends the effect.
