Welcome one and all, to the Prints Guide, a companion to your visit of the Fish Prints Museum of Eorzea and Beyond! Within this document you will find a detail of which fish prints are included within each of the rooms as well as the main building. Canvas sizes are included to help narrow down fish.

Should you wish to acquire some of these prints for yourself, most are available on the Market Board. Those underlined in the list, however, cannot be bought and oftentimes are untradable.

Visual Guide implementation coming soon.

ROOM 2

Eastern La Noscea

The streams and rivers are populated by no less than three distinct species of uniquely colored goldfish, as well as two different patterned puffers and two types of eels. The waters of the ocean lapping upon the beaches house two coexisting species of sharks, the largest being the Megalodon. Featured upon the largest canvases offered here, the beast of a fish called the Nepto Dragon is one of the legendary catches in a fisher's lifetime.

ROOM 3

Western la Noscea

One would say a fisher's true journey starts at Brewer's Beacon, where most first try their hand at catching the elusive Navigator's Brand. This region also provides a challenge in a catch one would be able to boast of: Endoceras.

L - Halibut

ROOM 4

Upper, Outer La Noscea

Connected by Bronze Lake, these two regions see many similar fish throughout their waters, with the King of the Spring being caught from either shore, which makes it a most unique catch. The largest fish is Toramafish, a particularly large Coeurlfish.

M - Jade Eel
S - Pond Mussel

ROOM 5

New/Old Gridania, Central Shroud, Lavender Beds, East Shroud

No fewer than three species of carp are present within this region's waters. One of the most interesting specimens may be the mushroom crab, which scrapes funguar spores from where it lies in order to grow mushrooms upon its back for use as a food source.

S - Crayfish

ROOM 6

South, North Shroud

From the streams of Urth's Gift, great care was taken into obtaining the finer details of the legendary fish known as Namitaro, another catch of a lifetime in a fisher's record books. Notably from this room is the Five-ilm Pleco, which is the smallest of its species.

ROOM 7

The Goblet, Western and Central Thanalan

The many rivers feed into Thanalan as well as the sea surrounding it is where many aquatic creatures have made their homes. Most are of smaller size, however even within the same species of crayfish, one is able to observe notable differences, such as the Eunuch Crayfish being smaller than the Bone Crayfish. The most notable catch is known as the Pirate's Bane, an even stronger cousin to the Titanic Sawfish, the latter fabled to have cut a galleon in two with a swipe of its saw-like head.

ROOM 8

Eastern, Southern, Northern Thanalan

Where there is water, fish thrive, or so one would believe. This perception may change once one discovers the joy of sandfishing in Southern Thanalan, where fish have adapted to living upon sand as if it were water. Of note here is Olgoi-Khorkoi, a beast with a gaping mouth, and the fabled Helicoprion which possesses a maw with long, curved teeth that allow it to latch upon airborne prey such as the Storm Rider, a species of flying fish.

Mor Dhona

Once hardly hospitable to more than small encampments due to its miasma-laced air, with the beasts that once roamed it gone thanks to the calamity Mor Dhona has seen a variety of slightly different denizens to populate its land. The two largest fish within are native to the North Shards, with Canavan being a large Morinabaligi, and the legendary catfish affectionately named Kuno the Killer.

ROOM 10

Coerthas Central Highlands

This region is where fishers get their first taste of skyfishing, which allows them to be able to catch various new creatures, each only larger than the next. Mahar is a slightly larger Rhamphorhynchus, but even their combined might is not enough to detract attention from this region's rare catch: Shonisaurus, its patterns applied upon the canvas with great care.

ROOM 11

Coerthas Western Highlands

The fish with the strongest bite relative to its size might simply be the Battle Galley. One would be unable to tell from the medium-sized canvas this fish is printed on, but the tug it makes upon a fisher's line is met with shock upon seeing a catch of this small size. The largest fish population in the region may be the Ice Faerie, for it is said that for any one that gets fished up from Clearpool, five more spawn in its place.

ROOM 12

Sea of Clouds

Gigantism is the word for this region. With only two bodies of water to its name, most fish are caught within the floating islands' skies. Such a large area to live in causes the species to be bigger than any other, anywhere else on land if they have any counterparts. One may easily picture the Basking Shark's wide mouth swallowing a small island whole.

S - Hedgemole Cricket	XL - Paikiller	L - Sky Sweeper

L - Red Sky Coral	L - Winged Gurnard

Azys Lla

Old Allagan experiments and odd creatures live in aetherochemical pools and tainted waters alike. The Unidentified Flying Biomass found in the Habisphere is actually the largest species of clam. Fishers can catch the unique specimen known as Opabinia at The Flagship. It has been carefully printed upon a large canvas for you to marvel and wonder at.

ROOM 14

The Dravanian Forelands

The home of wild chocobos and lush forests, this area is known for the Iron feast, a source that feeds the Hundred Throes and the Whilom River, which branches off into the Smoldering Wastes: a river with heated pools. A common fish found in all those water systems is the Blueclaw Shrimp. In the first three one can find the Pipira Pira, highly favored by Ishgardians.

L - Whilom Catfish	S - Rock Mussel	XL - Caiman
M - Pipira Pira	L - Three-lip Carp	L - Thunderbolt Eel

S - River Shrimp	XL - The Dreamweaver
XL - Scaleripper	M - Dragonhead

ROOM 15

The Dravanian Forelands: Lava Pools

The specimens found here all live within pools of boiling lava, where one would be shocked to learn life does thrive even within the pools of constantly bubbling liquid. Their unique shimmer has been printed upon the canvas with as much detail as possible. The legendary catch here is Problematicus, the largest fish known in Eorzea, begging the question: what can a fisher not fish when it is found at the end of their fishing line?

M - Lava Crab	M - Aithon's Colt	L - Riddle
M - Granite Crab	L - Magma Tree	XL - Fossil tongue

XL - Meteortoise	M - Hoplite	XL - Problematicus

ROOM 16

The Dravanian Hinterlands

Once a proud colony of Sharlayan, the area has fallen in ruins and was overtaken by the capable and cunning goblins. Incidentally a Primal also made the area its home, a happening that hardly fazed the aquatic life around the area. One is able to behold the fierce form of the Tigerfish, which thankfully does not share waters with the Thaliak Caiman. Within this room is found the largest species of lobster, the Yalm Lobster.

ROOM 17

The Churning Mists

Home to many species of dragons as well as ever-mischievous Moogles, the Churning Mists is an area surrounded by floating islands with fish coming from both pools of water and the skies. The largest of their species living here, both Blue Medusa and Rudderfish reach impressive size in the skies that are their home. Dimorphodon and Raimdellopterus are both the rulers of different skies, the former recognizable by its wings' streaked patterns.

ROOM 18

Rhalgr's Reach, The Fringes

Within the city live two distinct types of catfish, one which possesses a red tail that gives it its name. The techniques used in gyotaku as of now are not yet advanced enough to be able to faithfully reproduce the colors of fish. The largest catch within the Fringes is made at Timmon Beck, with Xenacanthus being a fisher's fame.

The Peaks

Mostly made of small fishing holes, the area is home to very few large-sized fish. Deemster is a type of sturgeon that is regularly seen, but the other two are unique catches: Moksha and the very rare sight of an interesting specimen called Drepanaspis.

The Lochs

On the way to the Ala Mhigan Quarter one would spy a single hole from which to fish from. The surface hides many and more fish within the salt-saturated waters that live within a complicated system of caves among the sunken ruins of a long-gone era. The most impressive and largest fish can be reeled in from the shores, a shark with a rocky protuberance on its head named Stethacanthus.

The Ruby Sea / Kugane Piers, Shirogane

The city and its adjacent coasts and islands are a treasure trove of wonders. The most legendary of a catch is undoubtedly The Ruby Dragon. The largest canvas offered by the makers being too small for such a large specimen, our artists have attempted to make a depiction as faithfully as possible to the original.

Of note is also the beautiful Rising Dragon, a seahorse with coral growing upon its back that dwells within the waters of Kugane's canals, and its smaller subspecies, Hanatatsu.

Yanxia

One would believe Yanxia is home to the most awe-inspiring fish in existence. The region is home to ten unique types of carp, which are all found here upon canvas. Their differences are mostly in coloration if not size. While the undisputed king of catches is found here, the Warden of the Seven Hues lives within the same region as the smaller but no less beautiful Plum Gazer, Pandamoth and Seraphim.

OTHARD: Yanxia: Spearfishing

The specimens here are all from the deeper waters beneath the region. One interesting folklore piece is that the Yu-no-hana Crab dug all hot springs from the ground, for this crustacean has the unique ability to heat the waters around itself. One interesting coexistence is the fact that without Common Whelks living within these waters, the Kamina Crabs would not have made their homes here.

The Crystarium, Lakeland

All three fishing spots in the Crystarium's waters found within the Crystarium house the same two fish: Crystal Knife and Laxan Carp are more common sights than most of the holes' other denizens. Similarly, Lakeland's most prolific fish is the Hard Candy, a glossy ball of moss. The monster of a fish called Listracanthus is the most prized catch of the region, showcased upon the largest central canvas.

Eulmore, Kholusia

The fish of Eulmore come from the waters that lap at their shore, coincidentally home to the largest fish of this region, the Red Hammerhead, which is said to be a drowned murderer smith and his bloody hammer reborn. Fish of Kholusia include among the most unique the minstrelfish, a smaller species of shark and of all things a contraption made by dwarves to excavate underwater resources: Aquamaton, both found on medium-sized canvases.

ILSABARD: Thavnair: Spearfishing

The rarest specimen that dwells within the deep waters of Thavnair is the small Tebqeyiq Smelt. Not only are the surrounding Hedonfishes' movements making its hiding spot trickier to access, there is also the matter of driving away the few individual Dusky Shark and Xiphactinus that make this smaller fish even more shy than it is. Not only is this smelt an uncommon sight, it is also the fastest swimmer in the whole waters.

Garlemald, Mare Lamentorum

The specimens of Garlemald include an interestingly-colored garfish, the Icepike as well as a catfish, the Bluetail. Along with the Cerule Core, the three have taken the same coloration as ceruleum. Life finds its way anywhere, and the moon is no exception. Mare Lamentorum is where gigantic species such as the Regotoise the Lunar Deathworm dwell. The latter can reach sizes of nearly unimaginable dimensions, as such our artists have reproduced a specimen upon the largest canvas within this room, since even such a size would be too small for even the most diminutive catch.
