

Pain Points:

She can't spend enough time with her daughter, because she and her husband have to go to work.

She loves traveling, but can't because she does counseling in-person.

Dream state:

Having her online 6 week relationship counseling booming so she can stay at home, and go travel with her daughter.

Roadblock:

She doesn't post about it enough on Facebook and Instagram. The last time she did post, was in March.

Her website's text on the 6 week relationship course is bad and it is not compelling.

Solution:

Posting eye-catching images with persuasive text to her social media regularly, which will lead the reader to her online course and get them to sign up.

Improving the copy on her website.

SI: One Social Media Post->tropical vacation!

Hello Andrea,

Your post on how to handle anything unexpected was really funny because those cuts were made perfectly and it caught me off guard!

However, adopting this mindset is beneficial, as winners succeed by transcending failure.

And you can be a real winner with your 6 week online course if you promote it well!

Szaraz Gabor for example is taking the lead and sweeping clients from everyone, because he knows how to post intriguing content that people actually want to watch.

If you were to post content like him, you would be traveling to a different tropical place every month!

I created a Facebook and IG post for you, that you can feel free to use.

It is original, tailored to you, with an eye-catching image.
