3. What You Can Complain About

6. When a Complaint Becomes a Serious Incident

Some complaints may be considered serious incidents. This means there is a significant risk of harm to:

- The public
- Beneficiaries or participants
- Volunteers or Directors
- KCAUK's finances, assets, or reputation

Examples include: - Safeguarding concerns

- Serious financial loss or fraud
- Serious harm to someone during a KCAUK activity
- Criminal behaviour
- Serious conflict between Directors affecting governance
- A pattern of complaints showing systemic problems

7. How Serious Incidents Are Reported

The Board of Directors must report serious incidents to the Charity Commission as soon as they become aware of them.

The steps are:

- 1) Directors receive and review the complaint.
- 2) They decide if it meets the serious incident criteria.
