History:

- Meep was born long after the fall of humans, to two young cats.
 - They had not much interest in raising kittens.
- Meep had an accident at about six months of age, a large bird of prey swooped on him while he was playing with his eldest sister. His parents managed to fight off the bird, and save their smallest son, but damage had been done.
- There seemed to be a small change in his parents after their accident, while never distant, they never fawned over the kittens until Meeps accident. The two cats began to spend extra time with their kittens, and finally seemed to properly bond with them, while helping to nurse Meep back to health.
- Unfortunately it seemed that Meep would never recover the use of his injured back leg, the scar tissue running too deep into the muscles.
- When Meep was finally recovered and old enough, he decided it was time to set out on his own.
- Mumble, his oldest sister followed him worried for how he would fare on his own in the unknown. Their middle brother stayed, deciding to continue living in the old human dwelling their parents resided in.
- The two cats wondered for a while, scoping out the old human dens that they could get into and other rubble left behind.
- They finally decided to settle in what they believed to be an old junkyard, as there was plenty of debris creating warm shelters, and plenty of prey living within the smaller tunnels.
- Months past peacefully here. With plenty of shelter and prey to go around, Meep and his sister never minded guests and pass throughs, and ever wellcome a few cats to live in their small family over the time.
- When the snow began to fall however, Meep couldn't stop his curiosity, and he wandered from their junkyard home to investigate.
