Course Description

This course explores the radical and revolutionary movements that remade European society from the late eighteenth through the early twentieth centuries. Beginning with the French Revolution, we will examine how new social classes and political ideologies evolved alongside industrial capitalism, state formation, and imperialism. It was a century of many “-isms,” ranging from conservatism, liberalism, and nationalism to socialism, feminism, and anarchism. As we attend to each, we will analyze how new social relations, cultural norms, and technologies abetted repeated attempts to dismantle existing political orders and social hierarchies and bring new ones to life.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this course, you will be able to:

1. Demonstrate general understanding of modern nineteenth-century Europe.

2. Critically analyze primary sources and use them effectively to support your interpretations.
3. Identify an academic text's argument, synthesize it succinctly, and communicate it to others.
4. Assess conflicting historical viewpoints, weighing the merits and weaknesses of each, and formulate your own interpretation.
5. More confidently formulate and articulate your opinions.
6. Develop your ability to work in Canada's Library's special collections.

Required Readings

All readings for this course will be made available on Moodle. You should print out all readings and bring hard copies of them with you to class.

Course Requirements

- Participation (20%)
- Discussion Lead (10%)
- Reading Quizzes (20%)
 - 5x reading comprehension and source interpretation quizzes. The 2 lowest scores will be dropped.
- Response Papers (30%)
 - 3x 2-3-page source analysis papers on readings of your choice
- Final Paper (20%)
 - A 4-5-page argumentative essay responding to prompts

Participation (20%)

Students are required to attend all class meetings, complete all assigned readings, and actively participate in class discussions of them each week. It is your responsibility to demonstrate that you have done the readings by actively participating in our discussions. Your participation grade combines your attendance (10%), and your participation (10%) (i.e. informed analysis of assigned texts and engagement with your peers' ideas). If sustained verbal participation during class discussion constitutes a challenge for you, meet with me so that we may find a path forward together.

Discussion Lead (10%)

Once during the semester, you are required to open and lead discussion for the first 20 minutes of class. You should select which session you would like to facilitate by the second week of the term. Your task as facilitator is to complete the readings for that session in advance, and formulate a strategy for facilitating a discussion on the topic. For more details, see the resources on facilitating class discussion posted on Moodle under "Resources." You are free to structure the discussion however you choose. Your goal is to create an engaging assignment that teases out the most important issues in that class. If you decide you would like to slightly change the assigned readings for another text you would prefer, that is possible provided you discuss it with me in advance and make the change at least one week before the session that you have chosen to facilitate. I encourage you to consult with me on your session well in advance. You should submit your lesson plan to your instructor at least 24 hours before the session that you will facilitate.

If two people choose to facilitate discussion on the same day, you will be tasked with collaborating to lead a discussion that is at least 30 minutes long. You will receive bonus points if the discussion goes so well that we go over your allotted time.

Quizzes (20%)

Over the course of the term, you will have five surprise reading comprehension quizzes designed to ensure you are engaging with the assigned materials and to help you hone your skills in synthesizing and presenting academic arguments. Each quiz will typically provide three or four questions, from which you will choose two to answer in a short-response format. These quizzes test not the accuracy of your responses, but the extent to which they demonstrate you have done the readings. If you answer a question incorrectly or only partially correctly, but still make it clear that you have done the readings, you will still receive full credit. Your final grade for this component (20% total) will be based on your three highest quiz scores.

Response Papers (30%)

You are required to write three brief response papers over the course of the semester. The papers should be roughly two-to-three pages, double-spaced and offer an analysis of a primary or secondary source, or some combination thereof. For more instructions on the response papers, see the guidelines posted on Moodle. You may choose to submit response papers when you wish. I advise you to write your response paper immediately after the readings you hope to address, so that they are fresh on your mind. However, everyone must submit their response papers by the following deadlines at the latest:

- Response Paper #1 by 11:59pm September 18th (Week 3)
- Response Paper #2 by 11:59pm November 6th (Week 9)
- Response Paper #3 by 11:59pm December 4th (Week 13)

Final Paper (20%)

The final paper will be a slightly longer response paper. I will provide you with a list of prompts, and you are to compose four-to-five page argumentative essay based on the readings and media we have examined in this course. Your essays should introduce the topic without reference to the prompt, provide necessary historical background, and have a single, clearly identifiable thesis. I highly encourage you to rely solely on the materials that have been assigned in this course. No additional research is necessary. Do not hesitate to contact me if you would like to discuss your ideas prior to submission.

Due before 11:59pm on 18 December 2026.

CLASS POLICIES

Attendance & Absences: Class attendance and participation are essential and you must show up—and on time—to participate. However, I recognize that things come up where you may not be able to attend. If you are ill, please stay home. If you are absent without an excuse twice or you come to class habitually late, your grade will suffer. If you are absent twice in a row for more than two class periods either before or after fall break, I will become concerned about your welfare and your ability to succeed in this class. In order to make sure that you are healthy and happy, I will consult with your dean. If you are absent without an excuse three times, you may fail the course. An excused absence can take two forms:

- (1) An excuse that you inform me of—and that I approve—well before the class period for which you will be absent. You must communicate these absences with me by email.
- (2) A religious occasion, medical excuse, family emergency, or other catastrophe.

NOTE: Whether your absence is excused or not, you are responsible for making up any in-class work that you missed. It is up to you to initiate contact with me or with your classmates to find out exactly what you missed.

Late Policy, Extensions, and Penalties: Students are expected to submit their assignments on time. It is understandable that there may be extenuating circumstances which may require some students to request an extension on some assignments. All such extensions must be requested in advance of the deadline and approved by the instructor. If seeking an extension, please suggest the date by which you can reasonably submit the assignment. The penalty for late assignments will be 5% of the grade for each day the assignment is late. If an assignment is late by more than a week, I will worry about your ability to succeed in this course and have to report you to your dean.

Maintaining An Inclusive Classroom: Respect is integral to establishing and maintaining a productive learning environment. I welcome discussion and disagreement, but I expect you to be courteous, respectful, and professional in your conduct always. I will work to make sure that all students enjoy a distraction-free, civil, and supportive learning environment in which to learn and express their ideas, which means listening to others' ideas and addressing them respectfully.

Academic Honesty & BMC's Honor Code

I take Bryn Mawr's Honor Code very seriously. As per BMC's Code, "Each student is responsible for the integrity of their own academic work. Thus, it is important that each student read and understand these academic resolutions, as each student will be held responsible for them."

I regard plagiarism as a very serious matter. In this class, plagiarism consists of work taken partially or entirely from an uncited source (online content, a peer, a published article, etc.) and assumed as your own. If I have reasons to suspect plagiarizing, I will ask that you report yourself to the Bryn Mawr Honor Board. See the Bryn Mawr Honor Code and Honor Board Hearing Process in the Student Handbook for more information.

Technology

Generative AI – A primary learning goal in this course is to develop your foundational skills in writing clearly and effectively. Writing is difficult. It is a skill that one is supposed to struggle with in order to improve. Since the use of generative AI writing tools offloads many of the core cognitive functions that we are focused on developing, this class will require that all writing be completed without the assistance of generative AI. You may use the spellcheck function in Google Docs or Microsoft Word, but you may not use programs, such as Grammarly.

Note Bryn Mawr Honor Code's Policy on Generative AI: "Generative AI tools should not be used in the completion of any course assignments, exams, or written work, including laboratory work, unless an instructor for a given course has specifically and explicitly authorized their use for the assignment in question. Presenting AI-generated content as original student work, submitting AI-generated content without citing its source in artificial intelligence tools, and relying on generative AI tools for closed-book quizzes, tests, and exams all constitute violations of the Honor Code."

Laptops and other electronic devices – The use of laptops and other electronic devices is permitted during class. However, I expect you to strictly refrain from using programs that are not directly necessary for accessing the readings, typing, note-taking, and class-relevant activities. I very strongly encourage you to print all of the assigned readings for this course to annotate on them directly.

Phones – Phones should remain on silent and out of sight during class. Do not read and respond to text messages during class. If you absolutely must use your phone, please step outside of class. Genuine emergencies excepted, if you are texting or using your phone during class I will count you as absent from the class.

CAMPUS RESOURCES

Each other: If you find reading overwhelming, it may help to form a reading group to divide and conquer it. Remember that learning is a collective process and knowledge is built upon collaborative effort.

Me: I hold regular weekly office hours and can also make appointments if you have a conflict. E-mail is generally the best way to reach me.

Technology Helpdesk: All questions related to computing and software should be directed to the LITS help@brynmawr.edu, or you can see the tech bar on the first floor of Canaday Library. More information can be found at this link.

The Writing Center: Professional writers and scholars routinely seek feedback on their work from trusted peers. In addition to the feedback that you receive from your classmates and me, the conversations that you have with tutors at the Writing Center will prove helpful this semester and for the rest of your time at college. The Writing Center offers free, individual consultations on writing assignments of any kind. Trained peer writing tutors are available six days a week, Sunday-Friday. Book an appointment through the online schedule (www.brynmawr.edu/writingcenter) or walk into the Writing Center on the first floor of Canaday Library and ask for a conference.

The writing center also provides support for those who wish to receive additional training in public speaking, oral presentations, or strategies to improve participation in class discussions. The Writing Center is a resource that everyone should take advantage of.

Peer Advising: College is usually a big transition from the academic environment you have previously experienced. Speaking with a peer mentor is a great way to develop effective strategies for organizing and managing your time, taking notes, reading more efficiently, and meeting deadlines. To meet with a peer advisor, please see Academic Support Services, <https://www.brynmawr.edu/inside/offices-services/academic-support/peer-advising>.

Your Dean: If you are struggling academically or emotionally, or facing a prolonged illness, a family emergency, or any other issues affecting your academic work, please contact your dean for advice. Your Dean is Mary Beth Horvath mhorvath@brynmawr.edu.

Access Services & Accommodations

This class respects and welcomes students of all backgrounds, identities, and abilities. I am committed to creating an effective learning environment for all students, but I can only do so if you discuss your needs with me as early as possible. For students who need accommodation, I am happy to work with you to make sure that you have the support that you need. In addition to talking with me, please communicate with Access Services to formalize accommodation requests (accessservices@brynmawr.edu.) Please note that accommodations are not retroactive and require advance notice to implement. More information can be obtained at the Access Services website. (<http://www.brynmawr.edu/access-services/>).
