

March 7, 2025

Dear UE Families,

I hope this letter finds you well. It has been truly inspiring to see our scholars deeply engaged in their learning over the past few weeks. Their curiosity, perseverance, and excitement have been shining through in every subject, and we are so proud of their hard work!

In humanities, students are eagerly preparing to launch their upcoming novel units. It's always a joy to see them dive into rich texts, make meaningful connections, and develop their love of literature.

In math, scholars have been strengthening their understanding of key grade-level concepts. They are not only mastering foundational skills but also applying their knowledge to more complex, real-world problems—a testament to their growing confidence and critical thinking.

Science classrooms have been buzzing with inquiry! From energy conservation in fourth grade to earth systems in fifth, and plate motion in sixth, students are actively exploring the wonders of the natural world.

I encourage you to take a moment to read your student's grade-level newsletter and chat with them about their learning. These conversations reinforce their growth and help them reflect on all they have accomplished.
